THE RUSTLING CORN.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.
BY E. NORMAN GUNNISON.

Autumn days—the leaves were turning
To a saddened shade forlorn,
As I walked with blooming Kitty
Through the fields of rustling corn.

All the sweetness of the season
Whispered in the sighing breath—
'Twas the voice of sad October
Mourning for the Summer's death.

We were in our life's glad Spring-time,
And Hope had no withered sheaves,
Autumn tints had never fallen
On our hearts' unfaded leaves.

Youth and pleasure walked beside us,
I was young and she was fair,
And the ripened ears were rivaled
By the ripe gold of her hair.

It is said the Bird-of-Egypt
Calls all day "How sweet the Corn!"
And, O sweet! how sweet the maiden
In her womanhood's first dawn.

So a tale I whispered to her
In the still ungarnered grain,
And it rustled softly near us
As we trod the homeward lane.

Years have passed—we walk together
As we walked in life's bright morn,
But we hear a sweeter music
In the rustle of the corn.

A THRILLING ROMANCE OF LOVE, DECEIT AND CRIME.

CHAPTER VI.

By slow stages one's true love must grow:
'Tis passion only that is not slow.
Each word and action thus expreet
Confirm affection in an honest breast.—THOMSON.

Captain Howard Murpoint had not exaggerated his powers of pleasing when making that important communication and revelation to his accomplice Jem under the Portland cliffs. He had not been in possession of the marvelously comfortable suite of rooms at Mildmay Park many days before young and old, mistress and servants, were ready to pronounce the captain a most agreeable man, and his servant Jem a most amusing and obliging fellow.

The morning after his arrival the captain came down to breakfast elegantly attired in a loose velvet shooting-coat, which set off his strong, well-made figure to advantage. His smooth face was set with a pleasant smile, and his voice was toned to a half-affectionate interest as he shook hands with Mrs. Mildmay.

"I hope you slept well, Captain Murpoint?" she murmured.

The captain declared that he had never slept better, and that his quarters were all that could be wished.

"Violet is not down yet," said Mrs. Mildmay. "She is late; but we were rather later than usual last night, and I daresay the excitement of your arrival made her feel tired. Ah, there she is."

And Violet entered at the moment, and came up to give her aunt the morning kiss. Then she turned to the captain, and once again his bold, watchful eyes shrank for a moment before the clear calm gaze of her pure ones. His salutation was a finished piece of acting, so reverential, so paternally affectionate and so respectful. Violet shook hands with him and tripped to her seat.

"And did the ghosts annoy you?" she asked, as the captain spoke of his night's rest.

"No; they were considerate to their guest. Perhaps when we are more familiar they may be more troublesome. You have had a good night's sleep, 'tis evident," he continued, glancing admiringly at her fair, fresh, blooming face.

"I always sleep well," said Violet simply. "Neither ghosts nor indigestion disturbs me."

"I thought perhaps that our little party had tired you, my dear," said Mrs. Mildmay.

"No, aunt," replied Violet. "It was a very pleasant one," she added musingly.

"You must indeed have participated in for some time," said the captain with some truth. "I must congratulate you upon having some really agreeable neighbors. The vicar was a most delightful man, and Mr. and Mrs. Giles are most amiable."

"And what did you think of the Dodsons?" asked Mrs. Mildmay with a half-sigh.

"Most agreeable people," replied the captain. "So original and unaffected. The young fellow pleased me exceedingly," and he glanced at Violet under his dark brows.

"They are quite new friends—acquaintances," said Mrs. Mildmay. "Last night was the first time we have had the pleasure of their company."

"Indeed!" said the captain with interest. "Newcomers, I suppose?"

"No; they have been here some time," answered Mrs. Mildmay. "They live in the large red house, the Cedars; perhaps you did not notice it? You can see it from the dining-room windows. They are friends of Violet's making, and—and, though very agreeable people, still——"

"Still they are—tallow-chandlers," put in Violet wickedly, "and aunt cannot forgive them."

Captain Murpoint smiled a peculiar smile of conciliation for both the ladies.

"Tallow-chandlers," he said, "can be very agreeable people; but I understand your aunt's prejudice, my dear Miss Mildmay ——"

"And I cannot," said Violet with quiet gravity. "My father," and her voice lowered softly, "must have bought tallow when he traded with Russia, as I have heard, and I cannot see much difference between buying it in the first instance and melting it in the second."

"There is a difference," said the captain softly. "But, putting the question aside, I thought the Dodsons extremely nice people, and Mr. Leicester Dodson a well-informed person."

Violet looked at her plate. She did not echo the captain's praise or qualify it, so one could not tell whether she thought Mr. Leicester clever or not.

"Violet made their acquaintance in quite a romantic fashion," said Mrs. Mildmay, harping upon the subject, and she proceeded to recount the adventure of the runaway horse.

During the recital Captain Murpoint, who was exceedingly interested, glanced occasionally at the fair face behind the urn; and at the close of the anecdote, which Mrs. Mildmay made quite a little play of, he was warm and loud in his praise of Mr. Leicester's courage, gallantry and devotion. Violet, however, though the bait was skillfully prepared, did not join in with half the warmth which he had expected.

"It was very polite of Mr. Dodson," she said quietly, and added: "But he is polite, I think. He offered to come over this morning and look at Leo's foot. He says he loves dogs."

"That was very kind of him," said Mrs. Mildmay.

"Very," said Violet, laughing; "and I think he would have gone down and looked at poor Leo last night, if I had not peremptorily forbidden him."

Captain Murpoint murmured something to the effect that it was very kind indeed of Mr. Dodson, and asked for another cup of coffee.

"And how do you mean to spend the day, my dear?" asked Mrs. Mildmay. "I was thinking, if it were not too hot, you might drive Captain Murpoint down into the village, and show him some of our lions."

"I shall be very happy," said Violet; "though I fear the thought might strike him that there are very few lions, and that they are particularly tame. There's the Blue Lion and Martha Pettingal, who's something of a tiger or a bear when her fit is on her, as they say, and there's the coastguard station, and the Mermaid's Cave, and—that's all."

"You have forgotten our own lion—the ruins, my dear."

"Oh, Captain Murpoint can make acquaintance with them without the aid of a keeper. They are close at hand, and if he's fond of romance ——"

"I am, I must confess," said the captain.

"He can find any quantity within a stone's-throw of his bed-room window."

"Delightful," said the captain, leaning back and snapping his toast.

Then he broke out into an anecdote of some Indian romance, and glided on to another and to another, and it was sometimes sentimental and sometimes very laughable, until Mrs. Mildmay and Violet, who were not critical or hard to please, thought him a most amusing companion.

While they were talking, Violet, who was facing the window which overlooked the lawn, saw the tall, graceful figure of Leicester Dodson sauntering up the path towards the house in the indolent way which distinguished him.

"There is Mr. Dodson," she said. "I'll tap at the window; he may as well come in this way as walk up to the front." And so she tapped.

Mr. Leicester looked over the whole of the house, as usual, before settling upon the right window, then, when he did, he lifted his hat with a grave smile, that was also a very pleased one, and came across the lawn.

"Will you consent to make such an undignified entry?" said Violet, who, not being a very sentimental young lady, and possessing a deal of that dignity of which she accused Mr. Leicester, spoke to gentlemen without that timid blush and lackadaisical mock-modesty which some young ladies think proper to assume in their contact with the opposite sex, and always met them with an open candor and dauntless frankness which some of the holder-aloofs admired, and some of the timid and nervous class of men, young curates, etc., shrank from with bashful timidity.

"Yes," said Mr. Leicester, and, stooping, stepped into the room. "I'm afraid I'm too early," he said, shaking hands with Mrs. Mildmay and the captain. "But I thought, if I left it till the middle of the day, it would be too hot; and if I left it till the evening, it would be too near dinner; and that after dinner ——"

"We should be all asleep," said Violet quietly.

"Exactly," assented Mr. Leicester gravely.

"We are very glad to see you at any time," said Mrs. Mildmay. "And I think it is very kind of you to take the trouble, on such a warm day, to come and see Violet's dog. Poor fellow! we cannot think what ails his leg."

"We shall perhaps be able to find out," said Mr. Leicester.

"Will you take a cup of coffee?" asked Violet.

"Yes, I will, please," he said. "Coffee is a good antidote to the heat—is it not, Captain Murpoint?"

"Yes," said the captain, who had taken the opportunity to scrutinize the young man's face during the exchange of remarks; "yes, with a little curry-powder added. We used to take it with chillies every morning at Madras."

Mr. Leicester sipped his coffee and chatted in his grave way; then, when the coffee had disappeared, Violet rose to conduct him to the stable, and Captain Murpoint was asked to accompany them; but he declined, pleading letters as an excuse; and as the heat was too much for auntie, the two young people set off alone.

Mr. Leicester looked at his companion as she walked by his side across the lawn, and he thought that she was the most beautiful and the freshest girl he had ever seen; and he had seen no small number. Yes, Miss Violet Mildmay, as Mr. Leicester called up before his mind's eye troops of Albanians and Circassians and almond-eyed Orientals, carried off the palm from them all, in her light, cloudy muslin and broad-brimmed straw hat.

When they reached the stables, where Violet was welcomed by many a groom and stable-help with smiles and hat-touchings, the great mastiff Leo came limping out of his kennel, baying and throwing up its head with mingled pain and pleasure.

"Poor old fellow," said Violet. "See, isn't it a pity? He is very fierce," she added, as the dog eyed the stranger with suspicious, threatening aspect.

"I'm not afraid of a dog," said Mr. Leicester quietly, and without hesitation he knelt down and stroked the thick, smooth neck. The dog growled and put his paws on his shoulder.

"Oh, please be careful!" said Violet, apprehensively. "Quiet, Leo! Quiet, sir."

Mr. Dodson, however, did not seem at all nervous, and with a grave "Poor old man!" took hold of the bad foot and examined it.

The dog eyed him askance for a moment, then sat down on its haunches, and with great gravity, equal to Mr. Leicester's own, wagged its great tail and commenced licking the amateur doctor's hand. The dog's instant submission and docility were not lost upon Violet, and she watched the performance with a strange look of interest and amazement.

"It is like Androcles and the lion," she said, smiling. "Leo is most terrific usually."

"He thinks it is good policy to be civil, and takes me for the vet.," said Mr. Leicester. "There's a thorn in this foot, or there was, and it is festering. I prescribe a poultice."

"Oh, dear me! who is to put it on?" said Violet.

"I will," said Mr. Leicester, "if you will be kind enough to order some warm water and linseed."

Violet, without any further fuss, sent one of the grooms for the required articles, and Mr. Leicester seated himself on the top of the kennel and talked to the dog until they came. Then he mixed the poultice, applied it and washed his hands, all with the same self-composed gravity, which half-amused Violet and half-awed her. This Mr. Leicester, whom she had put on almost despised for being the son of a tallow-melter, was gradually winning her respect and setting her thinking.

"How kind of you," she said. "I am really very grateful. But I am ashamed that you should have had so much trouble."

"Not at all. I am very fond of dogs," said Mr. Leicester, and the speech, though it seemed ungracious, was pleasantly spoken.

"If you are fond of horses, come and see my ponies," said Violet in her frank way, and they turned to the stables.

"They are a pretty pair; they'd go well in tandem," said Mr. Leicester thoughtfully.

"Would they?" said Violet eagerly. "How I should like to drive them. Is it difficult?"

"No," said Mr. Leicester; "not at all, when you have acquired the knack."

"I must try," said Violet, looking at the pretty pair wistfully. "Don and Spot I call them. Do you like that name—that's my favorite?" and she moved her hand to a bright bay in a farther stall.

"Why, Spot!" said Mr. Leicester coolly, "but only fit for a lady."

"O dear!" said Violet. "I thought it was the most beautiful horse in the world."

"Then I am sorry I undeceived you," said Mr. Leicester, smiling.

They turned towards the house, and, after a few minutes' silence, he said, looking up at her with a strange hesitation, which proceeded from anything but nervousness:

"If you will allow me, I will show you how to drive the ponies tandem."

"Thank you so much," said Violet gratefully; "but are you sure that it will not bore you? I know gentlemen dislike being bored."

"No; it will give me great pleasure," he said simply. "When will you take the first lesson?"

"Oh, you shall say the time."

"This afternoon at five?"

"Yes," said Violet; "I shall be delighted! Oh, I forgot!" she added quickly, and with an unmistakable air of disappointment, "I am to drive Captain Murpoint over to the village, and perhaps he would not care to risk his neck."

Captain Murpoint came from the house at that moment to answer the question.

"Will you be present at a little equestrain experiment, Captain Murpoint?" asked Mr. Leicester.

The captain smiled.

"Are you going to ride three of Miss Mildmay's horses in a row?" he said with his smooth smile.

"No; Mr. Dodson has been kind enough to offer to teach me how to drive tandem," said Violet.

"I shall be only too delighted to make a spectator."

"Or a victim," said Mr. Leicester with his quiet smile.

"This afternoon at five, then?" he said.

"At five," said Violet.

"And I will put on three or four thick coats, in case I am thrown out," said the captain, laughing.

Violet smiled.

"Will you come into the house again?" she asked, as Mr. Leicester raised his hat and paused at the walk leading to the gate.

"Thank you, no," he said. "I am going down to the village for my mother. Good-morning. Good-morning, Captain Murpoint." And he sauntered off.

The captain looked after him a moment, then he glanced at Violet's face, which had suddenly grown thoughtful and rapt, and said in his smooth, well-toned voice:

"What a pleasant young fellow he seems! Has he doctored your dog, Miss Mildmay?"

"Yes," said Violet, "he has been very kind; he does not seem to mind trouble. Leo has a poultice on as comfortably as if a veterinary surgeon had fixed it."

"Very kind indeed," said the captain. "And now, my dear Miss Mildmay, I really think you ought to be out of the sun. Do you know you forgot your sunshade? I found it in the hall, and I ventured to bring it." And he produced it with a smile.

"Oh, thank you," said Violet.

"The captain put it up, and insisted upon holding it over her head until they reached the house.

They repaired to the drawing-room, that being the coolest part of the house, and there the captain was most attentive: arranged the curtains and blinds so that they should get the maximum of air with the minimum of heat, and, after wheeling the sofa into the shadiest part of the room, seated himself near, and set to work to amuse the daughter of his old friend. To one so skilled in the art of pleasing it was no difficult task, and again that morning Violet had to confess that the captain was the most agreeable of men. But there was another surprise in store for her yet. The conversation got on the topic of music, and Violet turned over her new songs, and at last, in answer to a question whether he sang or not, the captain offered to sing. He seated himself at the piano, struck a few chords, and commenced a barcarole in so sweet and yet powerful a voice that Violet was charmed. The music drew Mrs. Mildmay into the room from another part of the house, and the morning, which Violet had feared would be extremely dull, promised to pass away most pleasantly. To both the ladies' praises the captain was most modest.

"I had a strong voice before I went to India, and I can remember, as if it were but yesterday, singing glees with your dear father," and he looked sadly at Violet, who paled and winced. "Our voices harmonized capitally, and—but there, I distress you ——"

"No," said Violet with a long breath. "I—I like to hear anything—you must tell me a great deal of my father," and her eyes filled.

"Yes, when you can bear to hear it," murmured the tender-hearted captain sympathetically.

"Sing another song," said Violet, and he commenced a Spanish love-song.

While he was singing it, his good-looking face all in a smooth, placid smile, Violet heard her door open. She was standing at the piano, and she did not turn her head, but raised her eyes to a mirror which hung over the instrument, and which reflected the whole of the room. As she did so, she saw that the door was opened by the captain's servant, and her gaze was riveted by the strange look on his mirror-showed face. The man, thinking himself unobserved, was standing with the door-handle in his hand, with such an expression of infinite mockery and pardonic amusement on his evil face that Violet felt herself fascinated and strangely impressed by it. Suddenly the man raised his eyes, and as he threw by the look of mingled anger, alarm and suspicion, which displaced the smile upon his face, that he was conscious of her fixed attention upon the mirror. He finished the song abruptly, turned his head, and saw Jem Starling, whose face instantly resumed its usual sour demureness. Violet's eyes were quick, and though the interchange of glances between master and man was swift as a flash of lightning, she saw them—the one of angry ferocity on the master's part, and the warning, deprecatory one on the servant's. That the captain said:

"Well, James?"

"A letter, captain," said James, "marked 'Immediate.'"

The captain took it. Jem left the room.

THE GIANT'S STAIRCASE, ROCKY MOUNTAINS,
As represented in the spectacular drama of "Around the World."

"Pray do not mind us," said Mrs. Mildmay, and with a bow the captain took out his letter, which he had thrust into his pocket.

He was almost on the point of returning it to the hiding-place, for at a glance he saw that it was only a sham one, an old envelope sealed up. However, with his usual quickness, he decided to open it, and accordingly made a slight fuss with the seal, and, taking out a piece of paper, read:

"The pleece inspector's cum down to-day."

Captain Murpoint smiled.

"Business, my dear madam; business men always mark their letters 'Immediate,'" and he thrust the letter into his pocket, and commenced talking as if the matter were of no moment.

Violet played a little and practiced some new song, and Mrs. Mildmay ventured to pass through the French window into the garden, the captain accompanying her. It was after they had left the room that Violet, happening to glance at the carpet, saw a scrap of paper by her side. It was the captain's note.

"'The pleece inspector's cum down to-day,'" she said. "Why, where can this have come from?"

For the moment she thought that it must be the letter which the captain had received; but the scrap of paper had so little the appearance of a missive that had come through the post, and the information seemed to have still less connection with the captain, that she dismissed the idea.

"Strange," she said, and with a laugh she put the piece of paper in her pocket.

The captain had pulled it from his with his pocket-handkerchief.

CHAPTER VII.

He who flies from his pursuer must ever
Carry his pursuer with him, and ne'er a sun
But casts his shadow.

Five o'clock came, and with it Leicester Dodson. It had been very warm out all day, it was warm still; but Mr. Dodson did not look at all distressed, and his velvet lounging-jacket hung loosely and comfortably upon his muscular frame.

"Have you courage enough to face the weather?" he said, putting his head through the window-frame, "or do you give in?"

"No," said Violet, laughing; "on the contrary, I feel quite brave. I will not keep you long. Will you take a seat while I get my hat?"

He entered, sauntered to a chair, and dropped into it, prepared to wait the three-quarters of an hour which ladies usually require for donning hat and cape. But Violet was quick and impulsive in all her actions, and before ten minutes had passed he heard her voice on the stairs, again speaking to a servant. Before she entered the room, however, the door opened, and Captain Murpoint came in.

"Oh, here you are, Mr. Dodson," he said. "Can you tell me at what time the post goes out?"

"Six o'clock," said Leicester.

"So soon?" returned the captain. "I am afraid I shall be compelled to deprive myself of the pleasure of accompanying you. I have some rather important letters to write, and shall barely have time to get through them."

"I am sorry for that," said Leicester Dodson, quietly telling a polite falsehood, for he was in reality rather glad than otherwise, and looked forward with no little satisfaction to a tete-a-tete with Violet.

"So am I," said the captain; and as he spoke he looked round about the room as if searching for something.

"Lost anything?" asked the other in his slow, indolent way.

"Yes," said Captain Murpoint; "a letter. I have dropped it from my pocket, and I fancied I should see it in this room."

At that moment the door opened and Violet entered. The captain ceased his hunt immediately, and, murmuring softly "It's of no consequence," turned to Violet and told her that he should be compelled to remain at home.

"I am sorry," said Violet, echoing Leicester's words, and with as little truth. "Shall we wait?"

"Oh, not for worlds," said the captain with his smooth smile. "I shall look forward to a drive tomorrow or some other day; the lions will wait."

"They certainly won't run away," said Violet, laughing.

And she passed out on to the lawn.

"I don't know whether James has harnessed the ponies properly," she said doubtfully, as the groom appeared leading up the pretty pair tandem fashion.

"No, he hasn't," said Leicester after examining them.

And he quietly explained to the man how the operation should be performed. Then he handed Violet into the little toy phaeton and took the reins. The groom jumped into the little perch behind, and away they started. At first the ponies, unused to their novel positions and quite fresh after two days' rest, showed signs of rebellion, and started first to one side, then the other, and at last the leader ventured to attempt the feat of walking on his hind-legs. But Mr. Leicester's iron hand drew him to earth again, and, with a touch of the long whip, hinted to him that a very different driver than Miss Violet sat behind him. After a few minutes they settled down more quietly, and, as the feathery phaeton was rattled down the well-kept road to the village, Violet's face flushed and her eyes sparkled with pleasure.

"How delightful!" she exclaimed; "and how easy it looks!"

"Come and try," said Mr. Leicester, and he pulled the ponies up until he had changed seats with her.

Then Violet found that tandem-driving was one of those feats which look easier to perform than they really are. Her hold on the reins was not tight enough; the artful little creatures knew her gentle touch, and the leader commenced his old trick, and, in spite of all Violet's skill, insisted upon turning round as if he meant to enter the carriage and take a ride himself. Mr. Leicester smiled, and Violet pouted.

"Hold the reins tighter" he said, "and give Master Dot—or Spot? which is it?—a clean little cut on the left side."

She did so, and Master Dot immediately spun round to the right. Then Mr. Leicester showed her how to keep him straight by whipping him on the right, and Violet managed to drive him straight for some little distance until they came to a sharp corner.

"Now take care," said Mr. Leicester; but his warning came too late.

Dot cut the corner rather close, Spot of course cut it closer, and the phaeton would have been over, and its contents spilled like eggs, had not Mr. Dodson's hand closed on the small space of cloth that tugged the leader round. For the second time Violet learnt how hard and firm that hand was, and involuntarily she uttered a little sharp cry of pain.

"I am so sorry!" said Leicester, and his voice, naturally so cold and grave, grew wonderfully gentle and tuneful. "I did not mean to hurt you."

"No, no; it's nothing," Violet said, coloring with shame at her weakness. "I am really very grateful. You did not hurt me. May I keep the reins a little longer? I don't deserve to after such a silly mistake."

"Yes," he said; "there is a bit of straight road now."

He seemed so genuinely kind that Violet could not refrain from thanking him again.

"You are very good-natured, Mr. Dodson," she said.

He smiled rather grimly.

"You have discovered a new trait in my character, and one which would astonish my friends. Do you know that I have a bad name for that sort of thing? Only my mother thinks me generous and unselfish; all the rest of my relations, friends and acquaintances consider me the most hopelessly egotistical, selfish and indolent being on the face of the earth."

"I am sure they misjudge you," said Violet in her frank way. "They judge you—some of them, perhaps—by first impressions. Now, I might, perhaps ——"

Then she stopped.

"Why do you pause?" he asked with a smile. "Pray continue."

"I am afraid I should offend you," said Violet, with a little laugh and a flash of color.

"You need have no fear—I have the skin of a rhinoceros."

"Well," she said, but with a little hesitation still, "I was going to say that I might have thought you proud if I had judged you by first impressions."

"Why?" he asked.

"Why?" she repeated. "Are you sure that I shall not offend you?"

"Quite," he said with a short laugh. "Pray go on."

"Well, then, if you remember how abruptly you turned away from that morning's meeting, how foolishly and recklessly, but so heroically, risked your life for my paltry sunshade? You actually refused to shake hands," and she laughed, "and turned away with the cut direct."

He laughed, and looked up at her with a half-amused smile.

"I did, did I?" he said. "Come, I will be candid. I had judged you not by first impressions, but by hearsay. The unkind things said of one always get repeated—one's friends always see to that. And I have heard some of the mighty civil things your aunt, and perhaps you, had said of tallow-chandlers in general, and ourselves and the Cedars in particular."

Violet crimsoned, and whipped Dot almost angrily for very shame.

"And," he exclaimed, laughing again, "I thought, when you told me your name: 'Well, she shan't be compelled to know me because I picked up her sunshade;' and so I took myself off with all humility."

"Someone's darling sin is the pride that apes humility," answered Violet with an arch smile.

"Exactly," said Mr. Leicester. "I did not choose that the acquaintanceship should be one of my commencing. If you chose to look down with contempt upon tallow-meiters ——"

Violet stopped him with a look almost of pain.

"You are unjust," she said in a low voice. "And you forget that I never thought less of you for what you were. You are not a tallow-melter—and —and—oh! I do not know what to say, save that I am not guilty of the meanness you lay to my charge."

"Forgive me," he said gently and earnestly. "I was only half serious. I did not think so really. But," he added, laughing, "it is a fact that we made our money from tallow, and there's no getting over it."

"I am sure you are not ashamed of it," said Violet, looking up at his calm, proud face, from under her long lashes, and thinking that it could never wear so ignoble a mask as shame.

"No," he said. "And if you are not, we may be good friends."

"I am glad of that," she said blithely. "And I owe you a great deal of pleasure, both in the present and in future. This tandem-driving is delightful. What is that? Six o'clock?"

"Yes," said Leicester, consulting his watch. "How the time flies!"

"Does it not?" exclaimed Violet. "I must turn now. What a pity Captain Murpoint could not come with us?"

"Y—es," assented Leicester, but not very warmly. "By-the-way, do you know the number of the company which he commanded?"

"No," said Violet, "It was one stationed at Madras, I know, because he was telling us about it this morning. He is most amusing—he has traveled a great deal and knows so many things; and he makes one laugh one moment and feel quite grave the next. Do you think him good-looking?"

Leicester Dodson hesitated. He was rather staggered by her question, which was put with all Violet's blunt, plain directness.

"Do you mean do I like his face?"

"Yes. Do you think him handsome?"

"Yes," said Leicester. "He has a handsome face, I suppose."

"Handsome; but one that you do not like."

He nodded.

"If I must answer, No."

Violet mused for a moment.

"Do you believe in mesmerism?" she asked.

"Yes," he replied unhesitatingly.

"And instinctive attraction and repulsion?"

"Yes," he replied again.

Violet fell into silence.

"Why do you ask?" he said, looking at her curiously.

"Because," she said, "I wanted to know whether you, who of course must know many things, believed in what a great many people think absurd notions."

"I believe that one may be attracted by one man, and feel an antipathy to another, without a direct effort of the reasoning faculties," he laughed. "I'll put it plainer. I believe that some people one meets one likes, and some one dislikes and fears without having adequate reason for so doing."

"You do?" she said. "It is strange."

"What is?" he asked.

Violet hesitated.

"Tell me," she said in a low voice, "do you ever feel that strong sympathy or antipathy in meeting people for the first time?"

"Yes," he said, amused and interested by her questions and her grave way of putting them, and wondering whither they tended.

"When did you feel either feeling last?"

He looked hard at her, then answered:

"This morning."

"Of antipathy or sympathy?"

"Of antipathy," he replied.

Violet raised her eyes to his.

He was struck by the look of solemn appeal and wistfulness in their great depths.

"Will you tell me by whom that antipathy was awakened?" she asked. "Do not think I am asking for mere idle curiosity—or, rather, please think so, and, just to humor a lady's whim, answer."

"By whom?" he said. "Well, I will answer, though it is scarcely fair or just. The person who aroused that peculiar feeling of dislike and distrust was—shall here is Captain Murpoint," he broke off, as the captain's tall and powerful figure stepped out on to the path beside the drive.

So sudden was his appearance, seeming to grow out of her thoughts, as it were, that Violet, who was the most nervous or sentimental young lady, half started and certainly paled. In starting, she tugged the reins. Dot and Spot took the jerk as an excuse for a little frolicsome, and started off, with their heads down, viciously. Leicester, who had noticed her start, and the sudden pallor, caught hold of her hand and soon guided the spirited ponies into a trot again. But Violet's hands and his had met once more, and the contact had produced a strange thrill, which was as wonderful as that feeling which they had been speaking of, but it was certainly not one of antipathy. Leicester stepped out, handed Violet to the steps, then, after patting the ponies, held out his hand.

"Will you not come in?" said Violet.

"No, thank you. It is near dinner-time. I hope you are not tired?"

"No," said Violet, giving him her hand, which he kept while she finished speaking. "No; and I am very much obliged to you. Good-bye."

"Good-bye," he said, and perhaps unconsciously he pressed her little hand as he released it. Then he turned, and Violet, watching him, saw him stand for a moment to exchange a good-day with Captain Murpoint, then stride on. It was near dinner-time, as he had said, and he sauntered up to his room and put himself into the hands of his valet with his usual indolence. Then he came down to dinner, and ate it with rather more than his usual gravity, talking little, save to his mother, to whom he was always the perfection of knightly courtesy. Once only he seemed cold, and that was when she said: "Leicester, we have been talking of returning the Mildmays' dinner-party. What day would you like me to ask them?" for she always consulted her darling son on every matter, important or trifling.

"I do not care," he said; "I am going to town to-morrow, and I may not return for a week or two. You might ask them next week."

"Going to town?" said Mrs. Dodson ruefully. "Why, my dear Leicester, you said you would stay a month with us!"

"I must go to-morrow, mother," he said, and she knew that it was useless to contend against the fiat when pronounced in that calm, cold tone.

After dinner he strolled out on to the cliffs and lit a cigar.

"Yes," he muttered, looking at the sea, lying like a great opal in the low sunset. "I will go to town: I am better there out of mischief. She is very pretty—beautiful, I think, if any woman's face did deserve the word; and there is something about her—is it her voice, or her look, or that swift turn of the head?—which moves me as never voice or look or gesture of woman moved me yet. She is a beautiful, bewitching snare; and as I have no desire to be snared, as I am too selfish, too cynical, too philosophical to make any woman happy, I will fly. Yes; I will go to town before the danger grows greater." And as to resolve and perform were nearly one with Mr. Leicester Dodson, to town he went, and Violet saw his dog-cart rattling down to Burfield from her bedroom window.

He went to town; but, as we have seen, he could not be happy, contented, or even satisfied, and before the fortnight had passed he was on his way back to Penruddle, with Bertie Fairfax accompanying him.

Fate stands at the portals of life's path, beckons with inexorable finger; and man, though he strive against the stern command, and struggle to avoid that particular path up which the great fate beckons him, must yield at last and walk on to his happiness or his doom.

Fate beckons you, Leicester Dodson; and, though you proudly set your face against its decree, you cannot avoid the inevitable.

CHARLEY ROSS IN WAX.

The Funny Side of the Abduction Case. A Liberal Offer from a Circus Owner.

Said Charley Ross' father to a reporter: "When I was up in Canada, for the first time, six or seven months ago, working out a clue, one of my friends there told me that Cole's Circus had been along not long before with a wax-figure of Charley Ross, and that they had distributed circulars setting forth that the boy's parents had offered $5,000 reward for his recovery, that the ladies of Philadelphia would give $3,000 more, and that Cole himself would add $2,000. This circular created a great deal of excitement throughout the country, and hundreds of people flocked in from miles around to see the figure—people who ordinarily would not go near a circus. I tried to get my friend to send me one of the circulars (a habit he had once in his life, as we thought), but he hasn't done it, and I guess he has overlooked it. Well, at any rate, I got another clue that required my presence in Canada, and a few weeks ago I went up again. I had a friend with me, and when we got to a little town in the interior, where we were to change cars, we had a two hours to wait for the next train. Almost the first thing we saw in the town was a fence posted over with circus-bills. I won't tell you the name of the circus, for the owner is a very clever fellow, and I don't want to make him feel bad. On one of the bills was a huge cut of a boy labeled Charley Ross, and the small bills advertised waxfigures of Charley Ross and who it was stolen by. Of course I was interested at once, and proposed that we should go down and see it, though I hadn't been inside a circus tent for eighteen years before. When we got to the circus, and bought our tickets, the first thing we saw in the menagerie tent was a big cage divided into two parts. In the first part, nearest the entrance, was a woebegone-looking family, labeled 'The Intemperate Family.' The other part was labeled 'The Ross Family.' A beautiful little boy, in wax, stood on the top of a small round table. He was about the size of Charley, but didn't look anything at all like him. His features were entirely too sharp, for Charley had a full, round face. Mrs. Ross, who sat in the background, was gorgeously dressed in the very latest fashion; but she wore a bright green dress, and the real Mrs. Ross hasn't worn anything but black for a long time. They had me standing there, just behind Charley, finely dressed, but nothing like me at all. The figure had a large moustache and a full beard, when you can see that I have no moustache at all, but a full beard. Besides these, they had a number of children seated on stools, and the only figure that took ed anything like any of us was a little girl that really looked very much like my little girl. My friend and I looked at it and were much amused, and then we agreed to listen to the comments that were made. So he stood at one end of the cage and I at the other, and we listened. But I am not going to tell you what we heard said. There was a crowd in front of the cage all the time—ten times as many persons as there were by any of the other cages. After we got tired of this, we started to find the agent of the circus. He was in a little tent alongside, and we went in. I asked him whether that was a good figure of Charley Ross he had there. 'Oh, yes,' he replied; 'it couldn't be better; it's taken from life.' I asked him a good many more questions about it, and while we were talking I happened to hear the proprietor's name mentioned behind me, so I turned around and asked him whether his figure was an exact representation of Charley Ross.

"'Oh, yes,' he answered; 'I had that made under my own supervision, and I know that it's perfect.'

"'Where did you get the picture of the boy?' I asked him.

"'Oh, I got it from his father, myself,' he replied, without any hesitation. 'I'm very intimate with the Ross family—go to their house every time I visit Philadelphia. Those are exact likenesses of the whole family.' And he gave me an excellent reason for having been at my house, which was very plausible, but then I know he had never been there.

"'I knew the family so well,' he continued, 'that I've offered $2,000 reward for the return of the boy, on my own account, and I'll pay it, too, every cent of it.'

"I talked with him for nearly half an hour," Mr. Ross went on, "asking him all sorts of questions, and he gave me very plausible answers to all of them. All the time I could hardly keep from laughing in his face; and after a while, in spite of the winks my friend gave me to keep quiet, I asked him whether he thought I looked anything like the figure of Mr. Ross.

"'Oh, no,' said he; 'you don't look anything like him at all. Why, have you ever been mistaken for him?'

"'Yes,' I told him; 'I have been taken for him very often. I am Charley Ross' father.'

"Well, sir," Mr. Ross continued, laughing quietly, "he was the worst taken-down man I ever saw in my life. He stood there for two or three minutes, and couldn't say a word. After a while he put his hands on his hips, and said:

"'Good Lord, Mr. Ross—you don't say so!'

"Then, after a while, he took hold of both of my hands, and held on to them warmly. 'You don't tell me you're the father of that boy? Well, well, well. I'm glad to see you, and I mean it, every word of it, about that $2,000 reward, and nothing would please me better than to have a chance to pay it. But I really did meet you once, Mr. Ross. I was introduced to you in the Mayor's office in Philadelphia.' And I rather think he was," Mr. Ross added, parenthetically.

"Well, for some time he was so confused he didn't know what to say. But, to relieve him, I asked him to tell me, candidly, where he got that wax-figure of Charley.

"'Why, I sent my son down to your store in Philadelphia,' he replied, 'and he got it of you.'

"I told him I guessed not, and he called his son up. The boy acknowledged that he had gone to the store and asked my brother for one of Charley's photographs, but that my brother had refused to give it, and he bought one outside. Then I asked him where he got the rest of the family.

"'Well,' said he, 'as you're Mr. Ross, I won't mind telling you, but I wouldn't tell anybody else. You see, we used to have an intemperate family and a temperate family. So we let the intemperate family stand, and just changed the label of the other from 'The Temperate Family' to 'The Ross Family,' and put the figure of Charley in front. That's the way we fixed it.

"I was a little taken back myself at this, but the man evidently sympathized deeply with me, and at the same time he had an eye open to business; for, as I was leaving him, he said: 'Now, Mr. Ross, when that boy's found I want you to let me have him to exhibit. He'll draw better than anything else that I can get, and I'll give you a thousand dollars a week for him for thirty weeks.'

"I told him," said Mr. Ross, "that I would rather see the boy before I made any bargain, and that even then I guessed he wouldn't ever make an attraction in a circus."

WAITING.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Without you, without you, my darling,
Without you, what more can I say?
To tell you how lonely I am, love,
Whenever my darling's away.

Without you, without you, my darling,
How long and how weary the day!
I sit and I think of you, dearest,
And fancy you hear, though away.

I wait and I watch for your coming
Till my heart it grows heavy with sighs,
As each dying day dies without you,
And another to-morrow goes by.

How many to-morrows may pass, love,
How many to-morrows may be!
The longest one but brings me nearer
To heaven, my last hope, or thee.

With eyes now half shut, love, I see you,
As strong and as brave and as true
As the day that you gazed in my eyes
And whispered "Dear girl, I love you."

Yes, dear one, I [illegible] see thee,
I feel thy dear [illegible] my hair,
And I hear thy dear voice as you murmur:
"Forget now all [illegible] and care."

But often and often and often
I awake with a start and a sigh
From the sweet dream of hope and of thee, love,
As slowly each day passes by.

But my heart never wearies with watching,
Though weary and long is the day;
I try to be brave through it all, love,
And strive to be cheerful and gay.

I cannot but think you will come, love—
My watching will not be in vain;
I know that each day brings me nearer
The end of this sorrow and pain.

And if on this earth we must part, love,
I know there will come a day
When each parted soul's reunited:
So, my darling, I wait for that day. NOMRA.

HELENE THE EMPRESS OF THE AIR.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY MNEMOSYNE.

Not a single heart in the vast and gay city but paid homage, and that most willingly, to "Helene the Empress of the Air," as she was denominated upon the bills; and, as far as physical beauty and grace of movement and dash and daring were concerned, she was worthy of it.

Even in the far Southern clime where she was performing—attracting crowds to the theatre as had never been seen there before—there was no one to compete in beauty of face and figure with her. Tall, lithe, the very personification of classic poise or reckless abandon, with all the witching elegance of refinement, dashed by the insouciance of the savage, she instantly attracted and firmly retained the gaze and admiration.

That she had been born beneath burning skies the intense black hair, lashes, and the warm bloom upon the oval cheek attested, while the flashing of the midnight eyes told of volcanic fire and a heart laden with passion deep and abiding—a heart to love with a fervor that few could even know.

But a brief time previously she had come to the city with a traveling concern that but little appreciated, and failed to pay her. Leaving them, she sought and secured another and

J. E. W., Boston.—A game of "pitch-and-toss" is played in this manner: A bets B that "Club No. 1 will beat" Club No. 2. The game results in a tie. Does A lose the wager? I have been called upon to determine this. My decision is that A loses. Hence was placed on the ground that Club No 1 would beat Club No. 2; now, they don't do it. B did not bet that Club No. 2 would win the game, but simply that Club No. 1 would not beat Club No. 2. And I cannot see why he (B) does not win the wager. To me there is no question about it. Perhaps it would be a little fairer to state the exact language. A says to B: 'I will bet you $10 that the 'Nonsuchs' beat the Mutuals to-day.' B says: 'I will take the bet.' The money is put up—the result is as above stated. The parties would like your decision in the matter. Please to print the question as I have stated it. They thus can see for themselves how it is, and there can be no dissatisfaction with me in relation to a fair statement. It looks to me like a question of law, but could claim no more from each. Please to ask such a question, and oblige.—[Yes, sir. A's proposition, not the bet.—Ed. CLIPPER.] If A's proposition is always our decision, except contrary, and A loses. This is always our decision, except in cases where there is a special agreement or a law (as there has been on the turf for the past few years) to the contrary.

A AND B, Poughkeepsie.—The bet is a draw. Neither is altogether right. B is entitled to the original ante, and also to his own twenty-five cents, and a corresponding amount from A and C, making seventy-five cents, excusive of the ante. The twenty-five cents with which A raised C is raise, and the additional fifty cents with which A raised C in turn. All the money but one dollar belongs to B, who was entitled to a stake, but could claim no more from each than the amount he himself had bet (twenty-five cents), in addition to the ante. To make it plainer, B could not win from A and C any greater amount than either could possibly have won from him. Finally, B's claim for a sight did not stop the betting between A and C, as to which sixpair, C having failed to see the raise of fifty cents made by A, the latter is winner.

BUFFALO BILL, Newark.—1. William F. Cody, better known as "Buffalo Bill," was born in Iowa Feb. 28, 1849. In early life he was employed on a pony-express and mail service, and during the war he was the guide and scout for Sheridan and Custer. He has also acted as guide for many parties of English noblemen who came to this country to hunt buffalo on the plains. 2. J. B. Omohundro was born in Virginia in 1846. He, after many adventures in the West, settled in Texas. After the war, during which he served on the Confederate side, acting as guide and scout for Stuart's cavalry, he was placed in charge of the Government cattle on the Western plains. He is a skilful rifle rider, and in managing and driving vast herds of cattle, gave him the familiar cognomen of "Texas Jack."

COREY, Pa.—A bets B that Haines gets a majority for Governor of Ohio. B offers to bet that Club No 1 would beat Club No. 2; now, they don't do it. WEEKLY TROTTING RECORD.

Where the words "second money" accompany the name of a horse, the meaning is that that horse won second money without earning a record, and that his competitor won in three straight heats. Horses that win less than second money are not mentioned unless they have also earned a record in that particular race.

TROTTING AT POINT BREEZE.

The Fall meeting of the Point Breeze Park Association was held at Philadelphia last week, commencing on the 12th inst., when there was a fair-sized gathering of spectators only, which was improved upon on the following days, save the 15th, when rain in the morning and threatening weather during the afternoon conduced to lessen the attendance. The first event was for 2:38 horses; purse $2,000—$1,000 to first, $500 to second, $300 to third, and $200 to fourth—mile heats, three in five; entrance, 10 per cent. of purse; six starters. J. Atkinson's b. m. Flora Windsor won the first, fourth and fifth heats and the race; J. Trout's s. g. T. B. French taking the third heat and second money; J. H. Phillips' b. g. Bay Jack second heat, and third money; and J. H. Goldsmith's b. g. Alley fourth money. Time, 2:33¾, 2:30¾, 2:32¼, 2:32¾, 2:32¼. The second race was for horses that had never beaten 2:30; purse, $2,500—$1,250 to first, $625 to second, $375 to third, $250 to fourth—conditions as before; four starters. Ben Mace's b. g. Sensation won first money by taking the third, fourth, and fifth heats, the other two having ended with John Splan's b. g. Kansas Chief in front, B. Conklin's b. g. Rarus third, and W. H. Doble's s. m. Nerea fourth. Time, 2:38, 2:34, 2:35¼, 2:34¼, 2:36¼.

First on the programme for the second day was the race for 2:31 horses, purse $2,000, divided as before; same conditions; eight starters. H. C. Ray's s. g. Billy Ray proved equal to the occasion by capturing the race in three straight heats; A. A. Snyder's c. s. Andrew secon l, Mike Carroll's bk. g. General third, and M. H. Whipple's c. g. Lookout fourth. Time, 2:31, 2:30¼, 2:31. Little Mary, Jerico, Lottie and Little Dorrit came in in this order. Horses in the 2:26 class then competed for a purse of $2,000, divided as before; conditions the same; seven starters. After J. H. Phillips' b. m. Ella Madden had taken the first heat, Daniel Jenkins' g. s. Joe Brown the second and third, and Ben Mace's b. m. Nellie Walton the fourth, it became necessary to postpone the finish on account of darkness. Upon resuming next day, Nellie Walton carried off the fifth and sixth heats, which gave her the principal prize, Joe Brown second, and Ella Madden third. Sir William Wallace, Barney Kelly, Royal George, and Annie Collins were ruled out for not winning a heat in five. Time, 2:26¾, 2:27¾, 2:29¾, 2:30¾, 2:29¾, 2:30¾.

The third day's sport opened with a contest between horses that were without a record better than 2:45—$750 to first, $375 to second $225 to third, and $150 to fourth; same conditions; five starters. Three straight heats and first money were won by H. W. Howe's b. g. Delhi, John Trout's b. m. Florence second, R. Penistan's b. g. Stiletto third J. Somerindyke's c. m. Melissa fourth. Lady Daniels was drawn after the first heat, in which she was last. Time, 2:31¼, 2:35¾, 2:40. Nags that had never trotted lower down than 2:27 were then called up, to trot for a purse of $2 000, divided in the usual manner; same conditions; six starters. J. W. Jacobs' c. g. Observer won the first and third heats, Briggs & Ross' bk. m. Blanche scooping the second, when a postponement until next morning was in order. Blanche then made good her claim to first money by passing under the wire first in the fourth and fifth heats. Observer being awarded second place, J. Peaks' c. g. Bonner third, and W. H. Doble's s. m. Nerea fourth. Fred Hooper and G. B. Daniels were fifth and sixth respectively, while Frank J. was distanced in the first heat. Time, 2:26, 2:28¼, 2:28¼, 2:25, 2:30¼.

The trots for the 2:29 and 2:34 purses were commenced on the 18th inst., but darkness prevented their being finished, and rain and the muddy state of the track on the following day caused them, with the regular race for that date, to be further postponed until the 18th.

GALLATIN, TENN., FALL MEETING.

The Fall meeting of the Albion Jockey Club of Gallatin, Tenn., commenced on Wednesday, Oct. 13. The weather was fine, the attendance large, and the track in good condition for running. The first race, a dash of one mile, for the Murphy Stakes, for two-year-olds, was won by A. Keene Richards' b. c. Grit, beating Phœbe H. (second), Wire Grass (third), and three others, in 1:44¾—the fastest mile time for two-year-olds on record. The Granger Stakes, a heats, for green three-year-olds, was won by W. I. Lynch's s. f. Sallie Gardner in two straight heats, beating Keene Richards' Redman (second), and Davis' Fyhias. Time, 1:45; 1:45¾.

On the second day, Thursday, Oct. 14, the first race was one of two-mile heats, and was won by Ewalt & Swiney's c. f. Emma C., by Planet, in two heats, beating R. B. Cheatham's Newburn (second), Elliott's Fanny Malone and J. Davis' Damon; time, 3:44¼, 3:38½; the winner was the favorite against the field. The second race of mile heats was won by J. C. Guild's c. c. Brakesman, by Jack Malone, in three heats, beating Grenoble (who won the second heat), Summer Rose, Ida Love and Cateran; time, 1:48¾, 1:45½, 1:48.

The track was heavy on Friday, Oct. 15, the third day of the meeting, but the attendance was large, and the racing excellent. The gold cup, given by the ladies of Sumner County, was won by J. C. Guild's filly Sue Wynn in two heats, beating Grinstead's Misdeal and Gardner's Lexington filly, who was distanced in the first heat; time, 1:50¼, 1:50½. The betting before the first heat was $50 to $10 on Misdeal; before the second heat, it was changed to $50 to $25 on Sue Wynn. The dash of a mile and a half was won by Keene Richards' c. f. Sallie Gardner, by Vandal, beating Arizona (second). Fanny Malone and Damon (who made a dead heat for third place); time, 2:45. The betting before the race was $50 to $40 on Arizona against the field.

On Saturday, Oct. 16, the fourth and last day of the meeting, the attendance was very large, the sport winding up with a fox-hunt in which over one hundred ladies and gentlemen participated. The Linck's Hotel Stakes, for three-year olds, $25 each, play or pay, with $150 added, mile heats, was won by J. Durham's b. f. Sue Wynn, by Vandal, in two straight heats, beating George Graham (second), Katie (third), and Planivoo (distanced). Time, 1:46, 1:45. Volcano did not start in the race. The Club Purse of $100, mile heats, three in five, for all ages, was won by W. J. Linck & Co.'s c. f. Sallie Gardner, 3yrs., by Vandal, in three straight heats, beating his only opponent, Brakesman. Time, 1:47½, 1:47½, 1:48¾. The purse of $150, for all horses beaten during the meeting, mile heats, was won by J. Davis c. f. Pythias by Vandal, beating Redman (second), Newburn (third) Summer Rose, Sebree, Cataran and Ida Love, the last-named four horses distanced. Time, 1:47, 1:45¾.

THE JEROME PARK MEETING.—The events postponed from the 16th, owing to rain, were decided at Jerome Park, Fordham, N. Y., on the 18th inst., when, the weather being tolerably pleasant, there was a good attendance. The first race was a free handicap sweepstakes of $30 each, with $600 added, distance one mile and five-eighths. There were five starters, viz., Shylock, Egypt, Galway, E. T. Carver and Burgoo. The race was won by Galway by half a length. E. T. Carver second, Shylock third. The latter was the favorite. Time, 3:04. The second race was for a purse of $500, distance three-quarters of a mile. There were two starters, viz: Tigress and Ambush. The race was won by Tigress after a close contest. Time, 1:23¾. The third race was won by Josie B.; Lelaps second, and Mattie W. third; time, 3:20¾.

TRIGGER.

THE LONG ISLAND GUN CLUB champion cup was shot for by seventeen members at Dexter Park, L. I., Oct. 12, seven birds each, 25yds. rise. M. V. Baylis, B. Talbot, F. E. Broadway, W. Wynne, B. W. West, and R. Robinson killed six each, and, in shooting off the tie at three birds, Baylis and Wynne again brought down all, as they did in another attempt; but in a fourth try Baylis knocked over his three, while Wynne slipped up upon the first and third birds. Eleven shootists then engaged in a sweepstakes, $3 entrance, 30yds. rise, three birds each. Messrs. Wingert, Broadway, Burritt, Birdseye, and Austin pinked every one of their birds, and shot off at one each, Austin missing, and the others agreeing to divide the greenbacks. Messrs. Wingert, Birdseye and Austin divided a sweepstakes shot, upon like conditions immediately afterwards.

THE LONG RIFLE ASSOCIATION $50 gold badge was contended for the third time at the range, Jamaica, L. I., Oct. 13; eleven entries; 200 yards, standing, off-hand; fifteen shots each. W. S. Elmendorf for the second time won the trophy, with a score of 65 out of a possible 75; Theo. Rogers, 61; Geo. H. Creed, 59; John Fleming, 58; Hon. J. M. Crane, 57; Elbert Remsen, 56; G. W. Dunn, 55; Hon. A. M. Oakley, 52; Elijah Nostrand, 49; Thos. Fish, 47; Wm. Durland, 35. The next and final competition of the season will occur Nov. 10.

THE SEVENTH REGIMENT SHIELD were competed for by eight riflemen at Creedmoor, L. I., Oct. 16; distance, 500yds., five rounds; highest possible score, 25. W. A. Conover won it with a score of 19.

COL. H. A. GILDERSLEEVE of the American Ride Team has been nominated for County Judge by the Independent (anti-Tammany) Democrats of this city.

GEN. T. S. DAKIN has been elected president of the Amateur Rifle Club, vice Major Fulton, resigned.

PIGEON-SHOOTING AT RYE.—Quite a lively series of pigeon contests came of at W. D. Becks' Central Hotel Grounds, Rye, on Oct. 16. The first was a ten-bird, stake match, at three Birds, $5 each, between J. Budd of Rye, Wm. Withers and A. Wilkinson of Westchester, and Reynolds of Mamaroneck. The following is the score: Budd, 3; Withers, 3; Wilkinson, 3; Benedick, 1. In shooting off the ties, first miss out, Budd won by bringing down his bird. The second was a match between Wilkinson and Budd, for $20, five birds each, and resulted thus: Budd, 5; Wilkinson, 4. A sweepstakes between Budd, Benedick, Wilkinson and Withers, $5 each, five birds, follows, and ended in a kill-ing four. They shot off the tie, first miss out when Budd won dropping eight birds in succession. Wilkinson tumbled seven over and Withers finished four, but Benedick slowed his first to go scot-free.

SEXTON CLARENDON GAME.—Of late, William Sexton, whose game has improved wondrously, has been giving Rudolphe a tussle at French caroms, the contests taking place at the latter's room in Fourteenth street. The result of these games having been a depletion of Rudolphe's purse, the latter, one night last week, went up to the Columbian Room to get his money back. In Fourteenth street, Rudolphe had given Sexton the odds of 30 in 200; at Sexton's headquarters, Rudolphe conceded but 30 in 200, and was beaten at that. It having been stated that Garnier could do better than Rudolphe, while giving Sexton the larger odds, the youngster is anxious to play Albert at the rate of 30 in 200, and this office holds $100 of Sexton's money in support of the following proposition:

COLUMBIA ROOMS, Near Broadway and 23d street, NEW YORK, Oct. 18, 1875.

EDITOR N. Y. CLIPPER:—Sir: Learning that several friends of Mr. Garnier are anxious to make a match on his behalf with me, I respectfully submit the following challenge: I will play Mr. Garnier a home-and-home match for $250 a side each game—one to take place at his room, and the other at the Columbia rooms, where I am at present engaged. The game to be three-ball, and I to receive the odds of 125 points in 500. In the event of a tie, a third game to be played, and the place of playing to be decided by a toss. In earnest of my intention, please find inclosed a check for one hundred dollars as preliminary stake, the balance to be put up upon the selection of a permanent stakeholder. Very respectfully,

WILLIAM SEXTON.

DEATH OF BERGER.—It was briefly called on Friday last: "Berger, the celebrated French billiard-player, is dead." Most likely, Claudius is meant; but the deceased may have been the brother of Claudius, or even, Chas. Burger. It is in bad taste to write obituaries of living personages, and we shall therefore await our foreign advices.

BILLIARDS.

A GRAND TOURNAMENT IN SAN FRANCISCO.

$5,000 in Gold.

As a supplement to the great four-mile race in San Francisco, it is in contemplation there to institute an imposing tournament of billiard-players. The subjoined letter is sufficiently explanatory:

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 8, 1875.

EDITOR N. Y. CLIPPER: Dear Sir: It is proposed to inaugurate a grand billiard tournament in this city, to take place during the middle of November, commencing on the day of the great race, Nov. 13, and continuing one week, provided not less than six of the following players will agree to come here and participate: Garnier, Vignaux, Rudolphe, Joseph and Cyrille Dion, Daly and Sloshen. $5,000 in gold coin will be given as prizes, to be divided as follows: 1st, $1 50; 2d, $1,000; 3d, $800; 4th, $600; 5th, $500; 6th, $400; 7th, $300, or in any other reasonable manner the players may prefer. The idea is to have a tournament which will bring six of the best players of the country here, and to render it as agreeable as possible to the players themselves, and a genuine test of skill on their parts. Deery and Kraker will probably enter, in order that California may be represented in the contests. The gentlemen connected with the matter would consider themselves under many obligations to you if you would take upon yourself the trouble of seeing the players, and endeavor to have them sign an agreement to come, and notify me as soon as possible, so that arrangements can be made to secure a place for the games to be played in, etc. Yours truly,

GEO. E. PHELAN.

The players can draw up an agreement among themselves, and either leave it at this office or forward it to George E. Phelan, at the Lick House, San Francisco. To save time, George F. Slosson, who is now in St. Louis, might communicate directly with San Francisco, at the same time notifying the players here either of his acceptance of this declination. It is not feasible for us to individually "interview" the players, and indeed it is not necessary. One of them (Vignaux) is not "interviewable." Up to the 11th inst., he had not been heard from by his partner in some weeks, although he is expected to arrive here this week. It is to be regretted that this proposition could not have been made earlier. There is now but little time to spare; and, by way of facilitating matters, should the players now in this city conclude to enter, we shall as soon as notified to that effect, telegraph San Francisco, so that that city may forward to this its written guarantee, either by mail or by telegraph. The sum offered is greater, by nearly 100 per cent., than has ever before been presented for competition in a tournament of billiard-players, and nothing but the fact that the intervening time is somewhat brief is likely to stand in the way of full entries. All the players named, except Slosson, Vignaux, Daly and Garnier, have been to San Francisco already; and Garnier, who two years ago proposed going there with Ubassy, has since expressed a desire to embrace the opportunity to renew that project. It is not likely that both Dions can leave their business thus early in the career of a new establishment; but one ought to be able to go.

BARNEY MCQUADE of this city and Manning of Philadelphia are to play a racket-match at the Centennial Ball-court, 940 Sansom street, in the Quaker City, this (Saturday) afternoon, Oct. 19. On the day following Barney is announced to play a match at handball, the best of seven games, against Pat O'Hara and Ed. Duffy, at Malone's Court, Frankford road and Lehigh avenue, same city.

THE RING.

MICHAEL FINNELL, the murderer of Ed. O'Baldwin, was brought before the Court of Oyer and Terminer, in this city, Oct. 14, for the purpose of having the question of bail settled. His counsel was absent, and the writ of habeas corpus was dismissed, with the understanding that a motion to admit to bail would be entertained by the Court whenever counsel chooses to make it, without the necessity of Finnell being present. On Oct. 16 the Grand Jury presented an indictment for murder in the first degree against Finnell, and on the 18th the prisoner was arraigned in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, which was crowded with the friends of the Giant and his slayer. A special plea was entered challenging the array of grand jurors as not drawn by Douglas Taylor, and Finnell's counsel addressed the Court, asking that his client be admitted to bail in a reasonable amount. Assistant District-Attorney Lyon said that while the facts before the Coroner did not prove murder in the first degree, the Grand Jury would have failed in their duty if they had not brought in such an indictment, and he thought it improper that the prisoner should be bailed, especially as he will be tried this term. Finnell was thereupon remanded to await the action of the District-attorney as regards the special plea.

"PUGGY WHITE," who has had charge of the ropes and stakes for so many famous ring-encounters, was found dead in bed at his lodgings, Fitzroy Market, London, Eng., on Wednesday night, Sept. 29. A post-mortem examination was made, and we understand the cause of death was heart-disease. His age was 64.

JOHNNY DRUMGOLD, who beat Jack Stockey, $100, 21 rounds, 35 minutes, Jan. 15, 1861, at Richmond, Va., and was defeated by Joe Graham in a room near the Centreville Course, L. I., 46 rounds, 65 minutes, Jan. 24, 1864, died recently in this city, where he was born thirty-four years ago.

AN OFF-HAND SCRAP between two employes of the Ohio Bolt Works, named Boylan and McGee, took place at Columbus, O., Oct. 13. After fighting six rounds, with the honors about equally divided, the "bobbies" appeared, and broke up the meet.

WILLIAM SUPPLE, proprietor of Supple's Arcade, Utica, N. Y., inserts a card in our advertising columns, denying certain allegations derogatory to Joe Coburn. Read it.

LUKE MURPHY had a first-rate house on the occasion of his benefit, which took place at Hibernian Hall, Prince street, this city, on Thursday evening, Oct. 14. Those who put up their unfilled matches were Johnson, Jim Dunn and Young Upton, Gillon and Hogan, Hurrum and Robertson, George Seddons and his "Nonse," Johnny Saunders and Billy Fynan, and Bill Ryan and Steve Lathe. Murphy and Billy O'Neill, in which "Dare-devil Barney" maintained the reputation he has long possessed. The boxing throughout was satisfactory, the three last sets being particularly good. Joe Ryan and Upton also wrestled. Uncle Bill Tovey was M. C.

THE EXHIBITION gotten up under the supervision of Joseph Dacey sady, for the purpose of raising a sufficient sum to defray the expenses attendant upon the last illness and death of the Irish giant Ed. O'Baldwin, will take place at Harry Hill's Theatre on Thursday afternoon, Oct. 21. Among the sporting men who have kindly spared Joe Coburn, Steve Taylor, Billy Edwards, Mike Coburn, and George Seddons. A dollar takes you in.

WILLIE MCCLELLAN, a clever middle-weight exponent of the art of fistiques, notifies readers of THE CLIPPER and other live people that he has established himself at John Wood's Gymnasium, No. 6 East Twenty-eighth street, this city, and is prepared to receive the medical operandi of stop, job and get away. See his advertisement.

THE HON. JOHN MORRISSEY has declined the nomination for Senator tendered him by the anti-Tammany Convention of the Fourth Senatorial District of this city, saying that, in his present position as an opponent of Tammany Hall, he cannot subject his motives to criticism by accepting a nomination for any office.

THE ROMAN WRESTLERS.

The match announced for "$1,000 and the championship of America," between those experts in the art of Roman wrestling William Miller, born in England, and Donald Dalgleish, a Frenchman, was decided at the Grand Opera-house, this city, on Tuesday evening, Oct. 12, and the clever manner in which the affair was worked up, added to the novelty of this ancient style of wrestling here, where the more artistic collar-and-elbow finds most favor, combined to draw and keep a good-sized crowd of spectators throughout the entire evening. The Opera-house is usually empty when it has had been congregated within its walls for a long time previously. It is questionable, however, if anything approximating to such a crowd can again be collected to witness a contest between the same men; for, aside from the enthusiasm and excitement, the disparity in the size and muscular power of the contestants was so marked as to render it, from the first, apparent to all who knew aught about the requirements for Roman wrestling that the Englishman would win—that his greater strength, coupled with activity and science, must prove of avail against the Frenchman's seemingly superior quickness and ability to wriggle himself out of dangerous positions. And though—probably to hold the interest of the lookers-on, give them the worth of their money in quantity at least, and pave the way for future similar shows—Dalgleish was permitted to gain two falls (the first and the fourth), thereby making the score even when they came to the centre for the fifth and final bout, as it turned out, Miller securing the last fall in just sixteen minutes. The first bout occupied about 21 minutes; second, about 11 minutes; third, 16 minutes; fourth, 6 minutes. It is intimated that a second match has been broached; and, as this one well repaid the principals and others interested in getting it up, we presume they will have another shy at the pockets of the confiding public. Referee, F. J. Engelhardt. Judges: R. A. Pennell for Miller, Eugene Creste for Christol.

HOOK AND LADDER RUNNING.—At the Plymouth (Ohio) Fair, Friday, Oct. 9, the Leiter Hook and Ladder Company of Shelby, O., is stated to have ran 40 rods, and raised by hand a 60-foot ladder, putting a climber on top of same, in 33⅓ seconds. McPherson of Clyde took second prize; time, 36¼. The Leiters won the State championship in 1874, winning first prize at every tournament they attended. At the Ohio State tournament held at Bellefontaine, Sept. 8, they won first prize, a silver trumpet and $100; also a monogram badge, valued at $18, for the climber. Time, 35 seconds; distance, 41 rods and 5 feet. They also won $150 in gold at Wooster, O., Sept. 17. The Plymouth race is the last this season, leaving them champions of Ohio for 1875.

LATH-MAKING.—A correspondent, writing from Acton Vale, Me., Oct. 9, says: "Fifty-four laths of pine wood, 4 feet long, 2½ 8ths thick, 1¼ inch wide, were made in one minute, on a plain lath bench, pushed through the saw by hand, by W. F. Leclerc and N. Leclerc. Also, 2,100 laths were made in one hour, taking time to oil machinery and putting wood on bench, same dimensions of lath, by the same parties."

BARNEY MCQUADE of this city and Manning of Philadelphia are to play a racket-match at the Centennial Ball-court, 940 Sansom street, in the Quaker City, this (Saturday) afternoon, Oct. 19. On the day following Barney is announced to play a match at handball, the best of seven games, against Pat O'Hara and Ed. Duffy, at Malone's Court, Frankford road and Lehigh avenue, same city.

METEMPSYCHOSIS.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Come and lay your little hand in mine,
And look in my eyes my dear;
For, of a rarity, I am seized
With a terrible, wild idea.
An exceedingly weird and fantastic thought
Throws my very being rolls.
For I have been reading a work to-night
On the transmigration of souls.

My empsychosis, they call it, love;
For a week, what d'ye think of that?
It seems you are likely, after you die,
To come back—it may be as a cat:
And I have thought, what if I should return
As a dove, little innocent mouse,
And perchance that fate should put us two
In the very self-same house!

And how some night, being very faint,
From my hole I might venture out,
And hover, perhaps, in a playful mood,
Would scamper and frisk about;
Or while I might be in a foraging way,
A tempting morsel for both,
You would suddenly jump from your hiding-place
And fasten your teeth in my neck!

I shudder, my love, at the very thought;
Or, what if it should happen that I,
Instead of a mouse, should come back to earth,
We will say, as a blue-bottled fly,
And you as a spider, and weave a web
In a corner some afternoon-day,
And I, with a heart that was free from guile,
Should happen to pass your way?

And you'd commence humming a little song,
And craftily ask me in
To take a bit of a snack with you,
Or a wee little drop of gin;
And I should get my legs tangled up,
And, when bitterly out of breath,
A victim to entire myself,
You'd should squeeze and sting me to death!

It's horrible, love—I know it is,
And very distressing to me;
And yet this book says just as wonderful things
As these are likely to be.
I wish that these strange and erratic ideas
Had never entered my head,
For I know I shall dream the most horrible dreams
As sure as I go to bed.

OLD-TIME GARDENS.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.
BY A GOTHAMITE.

The death of two celebrities of the olden time—Madame Otto and John H. Contoit—which recently occurred, naturally recalls to the mind of the passing generation a class of institutions once in great vogue with the Gothamites, but which at this day have passed completely out of existence. Public gardens, like that of Contoit, in no wise resembling the beer-gardens of the present period, and, although many were free for the entrance of the public, they were the favorite resort of the better classes of society, as the rude and rough elements of the town rarely trespassed upon these inviting localities, dedicated to consumption of inviting delicacies in the shapes of creams and confectionaries only devoured in the sweet company of the fairer sex.

The name of Niblo's alone survives, but no longer in connection with a garden, which, in its earlier days, was a veritable horticultural paradise, well supplied with flowers and tastefully laid out. The place had been maintained prior to its advent as an ornamental resort of the Beautiful Angel of Love.

TO THOS. THEALL, BY ROBERT MCKAY.

Beautiful angel of love,
Borne on the moon's brilliant beams,
Hover my pillow above,
Whisper to me in my dreams;
Lead me to lands of delight,
Where my rapt spirit may rove,
In the drear hours of night,
Beautiful angel of love
Chorus.—Beautiful angel of love,
Borne on the moon's brilliant beams,
Hover my pillow above,
Whisper to me in my dreams.

Beautiful angel of love,
O make thy home in my heart!
Never, O never more rove,
Never, O never depart!
Soothe me when sorrows oppress—
Fly from my pathway remove—
Leave me not in loneliness,
Beautiful angel of love.
Chorus.—Beautiful angel of love, etc.

THINGS THAT OCCUR EVERY DAY.

(After "Crime.")

TO MR. HARRY STANWOOD, BANJOIST AND COMEDIAN, BY SAMUEL N. MITCHELL.

I've been dreaming—oh, yes, I've been dreaming—
Of things that occur ev'ry day;
I've been dreaming of people who worry
And plod through the world in dismay;
They grumble at all that's around them,
And rant like a cur in the street,
While, if you attempt to approach them,
They'll squirm like the snake at your feet.
This world is as good as they make them,
But snarlers, I say, we must "shake" them;
For, no matter what way you may take them,
They'll worry and grumble the same.

I've been dreaming—oh, yes, I've been dreaming—
Of men who pretend to be kind
But neglect their poor wives and their daughters,
That they may seek pleasure, and shine;
They flirt on the streets and the highways,
And carry a proud, empty head,
While in some dark alley or by-ways
Their children are crying for bread.
Why learn act so queer and so bold, sir,
Is not at all strange; for we're told, sir,
That a score of poor women are sold, sir,
By armies of rascals like these.

I've been dreaming—oh, yes, I've been dreaming—
Of women who try to do well,
But are always abused by their husbands
For telling too numerous to tell;
If victuals aint cooked right to suit them,
They'll curse ev'rything in the land;
And if the poor woman disputes them,
She'll feel the effects of a hand.
A wife should be ever respected,
And never at all be neglected,
For only she must feel affected
At treatment she often receives.

I've been dreaming—oh, yes, I've been dreaming—
Of days in the future I see,
When acts of the present will vanish,
And all will be happy and free;
As things at this time are progressing,
A change for the better we need;
For now it is really distressing
To look on each dastardly deed.
Let ev'ryone hereabouts plead it,
For surely a change is much needed,
And now is the time we should lead it,
And have a reform in our land.

THE PEAK FAMILY In Cleveland, O., Nearly Twenty-two Years Ago.

Alfred A. Lawrence of Cleveland contributes a programme which he found beneath the floor of the Melodeon when it was recently undergoing alterations. Fannie Peak is before the public; Julia Peak married some years ago, and is in retirement; William Peak appears occasionally.

THE PEAK FAMILY'S FIRST ENTERTAINMENT, THE MELODEON, CLEVELAND, NOV. 25, 1853.
PROGRAMME.

1. Quartet—"The Merry Hunter." Words by G. P. Morris. Music by Peak.
2. Winchester Quickstep—Bells. By Adam Kürek. Arranged for the Bells by Peak.
3. Polka—Harp, Guitar and String Bells.
4. Duet—"The Pretty Page." By Mrs. Peak and Julia. Musicby Bishop.
5. Quartet—"Bury Me in the Village Green." Peak.

The following lines were written on the death of a young lady in California, who was attacked by a fever soon after her arrival there, which she continued to sink under till her death. Her yearnings for her native hills were indescribable. Her prayer was that she might be buried beside her little brother in the village churchyard:

Bury me in the village green, in the old churchyard at its side,
Amid the scenes I loved so well when sporting in my girlish pride:
Bury me there, oh! this is my dying prayer.

6. Song—Temperance song by little Eddie, three years of age
Ladies and gentlemen, listen to my song—
Hurrah for temperance all the world round;
Touch not, taste not, handle not the wine,
For every little boy like me
The Temperance Pledge would sign.
7. Trio—"Wife's Session." By William.

This piece was composed and sung by the Family at the great Temperance Convention held at Boston, Mass., July, 1845. It is but the experience of a husband and father of one of the first families in the community, who, notwithstanding the entreaty of family and friends, gave himself entirely to the influence of drink, until his wife introduced a new plan for his reformation, which she called moral suasion.

8. Fire-fly Polka—Upon the bells, with introduction.
9. Song—"Kitty Clide." By Fanaie.
10. Lore Not Quickstep—Upon the bells, harp and cremona.
11. "Sound the Trumpet." By Mrs. Peak. Himmel.
12. Scotch Ballad—"Annie Laurie." By Julia, accompanied by bells and harp.
13. Medley upon bells, introducing "Rosa Lee," "Yankee Doodle," etc.
14. Duet—First Dispute after Marriage.
15. Song and Chorus—"Marseilles Hymn." By Mrs. Peak. Rouget De Lisle.

"LAUGHING EYES OF BLUE."

DELEHANTY AND CUMMINGS' NEW DITZ.
WRITTEN AND COMPOSED BY W. H. DELEHANTY.

I know a little maiden, fair and young,
The most bewitching creature in the village;
Her face is like a garden of flowers newly sprung,
And she dwells within a little rustic cottage.
There may be other maidens just as fair,
With the same bright, winsome, happy ways;
But none have eyes half so lovely,
Such a sweet, bewitching gaze.
Oh, yes; she is a beauty,
So loving, kind and true,
And the only girl to suit me,
With her laughing eyes so blue.
That's why I'm always happy, light and gay;
Because, you see, my heart with love is laden;
Cupid came and drove dull care away
The day I met this pretty little maiden.
Chorus.—I know she loves me dearly— [Symph.]
Her actions prove it clearly— [Symph.]
That's why I'm always, etc.

One day, while we were walking side by side
(I never shall forget the look she gave me),
I asked her if she'd be my own, my bride;
She blushed and answered: "Yes, if you will have me."
Then threw her arms around my neck,
Which I took not amiss,
And in that happy moment
You might have heard a kiss.
Oh, yes; she loves me dearly,
And I love her the same;
And her actions prove it clearly
That she'd like to change her name.
So there will be a wedding one fine day,
And you shall hear the merry bells a-ringing.
We'll live out in the country, where the new-mown hay
Shall perfume the fair while merry birds are singing.
Chorus.—I know she loves me dearly— [Symph.]
Her actions prove it clearly— [Symph.]
That's why, etc.

AN AMATEUR PERFORMANCE Forty-one Years Ago.

J. L. Carhart sends us a programme of the above-named performance, which took place in Philadelphia, Pa. Of those in the cast, Edward Thompson, Mr. Morris, Miss Clarence and Miss Waldegrave entered the dramatic profession. Mr. Thompson became an excellent actor of old-men characters. He died in Baltimore, Md., July 20, 1865. Mr. Morris was Samuel Cappell, who for many years successfully managed a Southern circuit, including theatres in Norfolk, Richmond, Va., Charleston, S. C., Savannah, Ga., etc. He died some years ago. Miss Clarence became Mrs. Elizabeth Cappell, and acted old-women characters under Carlitch's, Wood & Warren's, and W. E. Burton's management, for more than twenty years. She is now living in retirement in Philadelphia, Pa. Miss Waldegrave met with success as a juvenile actress. Mr. Thorne died some years ago. W. C. Leibrant is living in Wilmington, Del., and has become wealthy in the leather trade. Nearly all of the others are dead.

SHAKESPEARE DRAMATIC ASSOCIATION,
Dilwyn street, between Noble and Willow and Third and Fourth streets.

The members of the Shakespeare Dramatic Association respectfully inform their friends and the public that they will reopen their room on MONDAY EVENING, OCT. 20, 1834.

During the recess they have been at a very great expense in erecting commodious boxes and pit for the convenience of their auditors. The seats have all been cushioned, and comfortable backs put to them, and the room entirely refitted with entire new decorations.

In some measure to aid in lessening the expense, the members have resolved to charge for tickets, at the following prices, on the first night's entertainment: Boxes, 37½cts.; pit, 25 cents. On which occasion they confidently appeal to their numerous friends and former visitors of the room to help to accomplish the object above stated.

Tickets of admission hereafter can be had on application to any member gratis.

FUNNY THINGS I'VE SEEN. Banjo Solo.

To JAMES R. TAYLOR, MEMPHIS, TENN.
BY JOHN T. RUTLEDGE.

I feel so good this evening
I'll sing you all a song—
I promise that I'll make you laugh,
And not detain you long;
As ev'ryone seems in for fun,
Of course I can't be mean,
So listen while I venture
The funny things I've seen.

I've seen a female elephant
Play seven-up, to win,
With Uncle Jimmie's Thomas-cat,
Who thinks it is no sin;
And if by chance the Thomas-cat
Held big cards and went out,
The elephant would then get mad
And "trump" him with his snout.

I've seen a snake and lizard
Go "courting in the rain;"
The snake was mean and vicious,
And the lizard she was vain;
Says snakey: "Will you have me?"
Says she: "You'll never do."
Then snakey got his back up,
And bit her nibs in two.

I've seen a tight-rope walker
Go up in a balloon,
And that is how there came to be
A man up in the moon.
I've seen a monkey's uncle
Play Hamlet on the stage,
And that's the reason Mark Twain wrote
The famous "Gilded Age."

Yes, lots of funny things I've seen—
No doubt you've seen the same—
For "all the world's a stage," you know,
And life is but a game.
Of all the funny things I've seen,
And what I'd like to see,
Is Tilton sitting on a chair
With Beecher on his knee.

"DARLING, SING THOSE SONGS AGAIN."

Darling, sing those songs again
That you sang long years ago;
There will come with each refrain
Memories bright as sunset's glow—
Memories of the days of yore,
When our hearts were young and free;
You will wake in memory's store
If you'll sing those songs to me.
Chorus.—Darling, sing those songs again;
Sing these dear old songs once more;
There will come with each refrain
Memories of the days of yore.

Darling, sing those songs again,
For I see in fancy's spell
Forms of those who long have lain
'Neath the daisies in the dell;
Those who sing a sweeter song,
Far beyond the golden shore,
Soon will join their happy throng,
Meeting there to part no more.
Chorus.—Darling, sing those songs again, etc.

THE TURF.

JEROME PARK FALL MEETING.

FIFTH DAY—TUESDAY, OCT. 12.

The cold northeast wind that prevailed on Tuesday prevented a large attendance, and the track was dead and heavy, rendering it very slow.

THE THREE-YEAR-OLD RACE,

for a purse of $500; fillies to carry 106lb, and beaten maidens allowed 5lb; winners of the year, of $500 to carry 3lb extra; of $1,000, 7lb extra; of $2,000, 10lb extra. The distance was a mile and a quarter, and starters, four in number, were McDaniel's Big Sandy, Chamberlin's Lizzie R., Doswell & Cammack's Invoice, and Withers' Revolt. Big Sandy and Lizzie R. carried the bulk of the money bet on the race, as follows:

Lizzie R.	$100	$225	$305	$400	$190
Big Sandy	60	200	200	400	300
Invoice	40	75	65	150	100
Revolt	40	75	30	145	160

Revolt cut out the running, with Lizzie R. next, Invoice third, and Big Sandy, who got off badly, trailing behind. Going around the club-house bluff, Revolt fell back, and Lizzie R. went on with a lead of a length and a half, the lower turn into the home-stretch. At this point Clark brought up Big Sandy and collared and challenged Lizzie R., and, after a closely contested finish, beat her, as everyone supposed, across the score; but the judges, who could alone decide the point fairly, gave it a dead heat; time, 2:19¼. Invoice was only beaten half a length by the dead-heaters. The deciding heat was run after the last race of the day, and the friends of both horses supported them pluckily at the following rates:

Big Sandy	$300	$550	$850	$400
Lizzie R.	210	500	600	380

Bobby Swim took Scott's place on the gray filly. Big Sandy took the lead, with Lizzie four lengths behind him, and, making the running at his best pace, won the race by two lengths in 2:18¾.

THE TWO-YEAR-OLD RACE—

for a purse of $500, three-quarters of a mile; beaten maidens allowed 5lb; winners of $500 to carry 3lb extra; of $1,000, 7lb; and of $2,000, 12lb extra—was the second race of the day. There were four runners: Belmont's Dauntless, Geo. Lorillard's Ambush, Donahue's Mollie Carew, and P. Lorillard's Cyril. The latter was made a favorite by the betting fraternity, although his owner did not support him for a dollar. The following were the current pool-prices:

Cyril	$150	$475	$900	$400	$700
Dauntless	80	235	380	225	350
Ambush	30	65	180	80	130
Mollie Carew	45	80	150	170	185

A very bad start was effected, Ambush getting off nearly two lengths in front, with Dauntless and Mollie Carew next, and the favorite almost left at the p'st. Dauntless soon caught up to and passed Ambush, Mollie Carew giving them both the go-by on rounding the bluff. The latter led into the straight stretch on the last quarter, when Brown brought up Dauntless, and, quickly disposing of Mollie Carew, galloped home an easy winner by four lengths in 1:21; Ambush beating Mollie Carew by a head for second money, Cyril last throughout.

THE TWO-MILE DASH,

for a purse of $800, had four runners, viz., Sears' Acrobat, 108lb; Sanford's Mate, 116lb; O'Donnell's Milner, 95lb; and Cottrill's Col. Nelligan, 106lb. Acrobat and Mate carried most of the money bet on the former, although reported coughing from an attack of the epizootic, having the call, as under:

Acrobat	$700	$1,100	$1,700	$600	$850
Mate	400	700	900	400	350
Milner	300	250	320	200	215
Colonel Nelligan	85	85	135	75	60

The lot got off well together, Mate going in front at the turn, but being speedily passed by Milner. On the first mile, Acrobat, Milner led Acrobat a neck under the string, with Mate two lengths behind them. At the turn, Hayward, on Mate, closed on Acrobat, and the three horses ran abreast to the quarter-pole, Acrobat, soon after passing that point, hanging out signals of distress. Milner then took a couple of lengths, leading under sufferance, for Mate was running under a strong pull, which Hayward did not relax until after getting into the homestretch, when Mate instantly responded by dashing to the front, and, without Hayward having even to move on his horse, galloped home eight lengths ahead in 3:48, Milner beating Acrobat for second place, and Col. Nelligan away off.

THE MILE DASH,

for a sweepstakes of $30 each, half forfeit, with $400 added, for maidens of all ages; if four-year-olds, allowed 3lb; if five or more, 7lb. Four of the six horses entered came to the post, the absentee being Revolt. The runners were Joe Cerns, Tattoo, Evelyn Carter, Gray Lag and New York. Joe Cerns had shown such fine speed in the Jerome Stakes that he was backed against the field at the following rates:

Joe Cerns	$300	$500	$1,300	$500	$600
Doswell's entries	80	210	420	160	275
Withers' entries	120	300	490	200	210
Gray Lag	70	65	190	100	200

Directly the flag fell Joe Cerns dashed to the front, followed by Tattoo and Gray Lag, Doswell's pair bringing up the rear. On the turn Gray Lag passed Joe Cerns and shot over the way until entering the homestretch, when the favorite challenged, had the filly beaten in a few strides, and, galloping on, won by a dozen lengths in 1:49½; Tattoo second, Evelyn Carter third, and New York last.

THE HANDICAP STEEPLECHASE—

for a purse of $800, of which $200 to the second horse, about two miles and a half—had five runners; Trouble (who ran for the first time in the colors of his new owner, Mr. Charles Reed), 158lb; Diavolo, 163lb; Deadhead, 149lb; Busy Bee, 121½lb (including 4½lb overweight); and Coronet, 144lb. Pools sold as under:

Trouble	$175	$250	$450	$800	$250
Diavolo	150	200	305	315	155
Deadhead	100	150	300	300	150
Coronet	155	210	435	510	250
Busy Bee	50	55	65	55	55

Deadhead made the running, followed by Busy Bee, Coronet and Diavolo, Trouble lying so far behind as to cause his backers great uneasiness. He closed up a little in approaching the water-jump, which Deadhead, Coronet and Busy Bee took almost together. At the hurdle at the foot of the club-house bluff Deadhead, Coronet and Busy Bee took last as he was making his jump, and he came down a cropper, rolling over his rider, Murphy, but fortunately without injuring him severely. Trouble now closed with his horse, and at the last hurdle he was alongside of Diavolo and Deadhead, all rising in the air at the jump together. A good finish ensued in the stable winning by a head from Diavolo in 4:22, Deadhead third.

SIXTH DAY—THURSDAY, OCT. 14.

Improved weather caused an increased attendance, and the track was improved in condition, although still far from fast. The racing commenced with for a purse of $500, for all ages; the winner to be sold at auction; horses entered to be sold for $1,000 to carry weight for age; for $750, allowed 3lb; for $500, allowed 7lb; and if for $300, allowed 12lb. Six horses entered, and all started, viz., Leander, $1,000, carrying 96lb; McDonald & Co.'s Josie B., $750, 102lb; Century, $300, 96lb; Evelyn Carter, $500, 85lb; Survivor, $1,000, 114lb; and Fleetwood, $300, 96lb. Pools sold as under:

THE MILE DASH,

Survivor	$150	$525	$255	$700	$675
Leander	60	220	110	410	400
Josie B	50	130	80	365	350
Century	20	50	30	70	135
E. Carter	30	60	40	100	105
Fleetwood	10	25	20	45	45

Leander went to the front the moment Captain Coster dropped his flag, attended by Josie B., both clear of the others, the favorite being third. Leander lead three lengths at the quarter-pole; but he was unable to live the pace from want of condition, and was immediately passed by Century. Sparling kept the shifty Leander going straight along, and he won the race with ease by six lengths in 1:46½. Century ran second, Survivor third, Josie B. fourth, the latter won by a head; Evelyn Carter a bad fourth, Survivor a worse fifth, and Fleetwood last. The winner was put up at auction, but George Lorillard bought him in for $1,055.

THE MILE-AND-HALF DASH,

for a purse of $600, for all ages—winners of any race (except handicaps, matches and private sweepstakes) exceeding in value $1,000, to carry weight for age; other winners allowed 5lb; maidens allowed, if 4yrs. or less, 10lb; if 5yrs. or more, 15lb—had four runners: Shylock, 118lb; Countess, 105lb; Arcturus, 90lb; and Athlete, 90lb. Pools sold:

Countess	$300	$500	$300	$700	$1,100
Shylock	205	405	300	505	610
Arcturus	225	360	275	410	309
Athlete	255	290	205	305	300

Countess took the lead, followed by Shylock, Arcturus and Athlete; but, before they had reached the bend into the homestretch, Hayward had pulled Shylock back, and evidently intended to repeat his tactics with Mate on the previous day, and "wait and win," Swim followed suit with Countess, and Athlete carried on the running, leading two lengths past the judges' stand, with Countess and Arcturus running lapped two lengths before Shylock. The latter fell farther back on the upper turn, and the Athlete, Arcturus and Countess raced abreast around the bluff. At the half-mile pole Swim moved up with Shylock to second place, raced with Countess until they entered the homestretch, when he came away from her with apparent ease, and won the race by four lengths in 2:46¾. Countess beating Arcturus by a dozen lengths for second place.

THE HANDICAP SWEEPSTAKES—

for a post stakes of $200 each, half forfeit, the Club to add $2,000, and the second horse to receive $500 out of the stakes—had ten subscribers and five starters. The exodus of so many of our best four-mile horses to California, and the going-amiss, from influenza, of others, reduced the interest attached to this race. The runners were Aaron Pennington, Nettie Norton, Deadhead, Willie Burke and Warrior. Pools ranged as under:

Pennington	$1,000	$1,700	$500	$700	$800
Nettie Norton	50	350	270	410	425
Willie Burke	150	410	160	180	200
Warrior	150	325	155	210	190

Deadhead went off in front, with Willie Burke second and the favorite third, the latter indulging in back jumping for three-quarters of a mile, when Swim allowed him to run into second place, Clark pulling Willie Burke into the rear in obedience to Col. McDaniel's orders. As they ran under the string on the first mile in 1:56½, Deadhead was leading Aaron Pennington four lengths, with Nettie Norton three lengths behind the favorite; Warrior fourth, and Willie Burke last. The second mile was run in the same way, except that Pennington took the lead against the lower part of the grand stand, and was two lengths in front at the finish of the second mile, run in 3:50, Nettie Norton being lapped on Deadhead, Warren fourth, ten lengths before Willie Burke, whom, in obedience to his owner's signals, Clark was pulling double. Nettie Norton ran alongside Pennington on the turn, and raced with him around the bluff and lower turn and up the homestretch, where the favorite outran her, and led her two lengths at the string, the three miles having been run in 5:43. Long before this, Deadhead and Warrior had dropped away beaten, and took no further part in the race. On the fourth mile it was evident that the race was left to Aaron Pennington and Nettie Norton, for Willie Burke was too far behind the pair to have any chance. The filly hung persistently at Pennington's quarters until entering the homestretch, when Swim, letting the latter go, threw away steadily, and won the race by four lengths in 7:43. Nettie Norton was second, twenty lengths before Willie Burke.

THE HANDICAP SWEEPSTAKES

of $25 each, with $500 added, for all ages—second horse to receive $125 out of the stakes, one mile and an eighth—had five runners, viz., Rhadamanthus, 100lb; Egypt, 106lb; Mattie W., 92lb; Leander, 93lb; and Rambler, 90lb. Rhadamanthus was made a strong favorite, as under:

Rhadamanthus	$1,700	$1,600	$2,600	$2,100
Egypt	800	1,000	1,800	800
Leander	340	330	1,100	360
Mattie W	140	220	330	190
Rambler	100	150	230	160

Egypt, closely followed by Mattie W. and Leander, was the first to get away, Rhadamanthus being fourth. Egypt and Mattie W. raced abreast to the turn, where the latter showed in front, and led Egypt a length and a half at the quarter-pole, the latter two lengths before Rhadamanthus, Leander and Rambler so far behind as to be practically out of the race. Egypt deprived Mattie W. of the lead as they ran around the bluff, and Rhadamanthus passed her on the lower turn, waiting at Egypt's quarters until well into the straight stretch, when Evans let him go, and he galloped home an easy winner by a length and a half; Egypt second, four lengths before Mattie W., Leander fourth, and Rambler beaten off. Time, 2:01.

INTRODUCTORY OVERTURE.

MONDAY, OCT. 18, '75.

While we cannot commend the evangelists for breathing the word of promise to the ears of the Philadelphians and breaking it to their hopes, nevertheless we are glad that our dear brethren Moody and Sankey have concluded to direct their batteries on the wicked city of Brooklyn, and open the vials of their wrath and indignation upon the most sinful people in our glorious confederation of States. The City of Churches has been growing wickeder and wickeder every year, until the sinners have succeeded in getting the upper hand of the saints, and thus enabled vice to triumph over virtue; but the evangelists have promised to reform all this: they have signified their intention to give the Devil a wrestle such as he has never had before; they mean to go at him catch-as-catch-can, and give him a series of clean back-falls that will knock the fight all out of him, and make his Brooklyn minions sue for peace and mercy. Brother Talmadge might have saved us the humiliation of calling in outside aid had he directed his efforts in the proper channel, instead of attacking the poor player, whose humble vocation it is to hold the mirror up to nature, as it were. The dearly-beloved pastor of the Tabernacle should have combined with the players for the suppression of immorality and crime, and their united strength might have accomplished wonders in the cause of reform. Our pious friend saw his error when it was too late to rectify it, and the good that had been accomplished by the stage in laying bare the vices of the times was nullified to a certain extent by the bitter hostility of the Tabernacle and those who worshiped therein, and Brooklyn was left to work out its own salvation, or otherwise to sink into chaotic ruin. Moonlight, at this juncture, Brothers Moody and Sankey turned up, after a very successful tour abroad, and they at once cast themselves into the breach, determined to "hold the fort" at all hazards, and save the citadel or perish in the attempt. Brooklyn has had a narrow escape from a calamity similar to that which befel the dreadfully wicked Sodom and Gomorrah, and like the latter, Brooklyn gloried in the possession of ten good and pious men, and thus she was saved. Yet it was a narrow escape for her. But for the presence of such men as Brothers Tilton, Moulton, Storrs, Beecher, Talmadge, and others of a similar tendency, Brooklyn and her Tabernacle would have gone down with all on board, and not one sinner would have been left to tell the sad story of her fall. So let us congratulate the churchly city over there upon the capture of Brothers Moody and Sankey; let us give her people our countenance and support and encouragement, in this her hour of trial, and aid in preventing French flat. He sees no one, hears no one, has his crumbs of comfort sent up to him through a trap in the floor, and for his midnight oil he burns a penny-dip. Yes, yes! Edwin Forrest once played in a cellar, and W. Shakespeare stole eggs with which to appease the cravings of hunger! Courage, brave hearts, courage, the back room attic may yet save you, provided the back rheumatic does not annihilate you....."Our Jim" will yet be the life of us. He has been reading a famous French play, and now wants to know what made "Camille" err so? Her violins of course. In case she imparts violence to her [illegible] in the other, feeling to her violins! And yet this is no new thing, for Nero fiddled while Rome was burning, which was a burning shame; and Dan Emmet touched the old Cremona before Chicago, phœnix-like, rose from its ashes!.....A man in Pennsylvania—a State which has had sufficient nerve to nominate Governor Pickett for some office—writes to us, and says that he Pitts bergh against anybody for double-back action charity. And then this marauder of the West goes on to say that Cole's Circus is the only one that has visited the Smoky City this season; but, exclaims the perfidious wretch, philanthropic people always took an interest in Cole!.....Our Boys' Home is another sham. Republics do not possess the lasting qualities that "Our Boys" of New York exhibit; but that may be accounted for by the superior quality of our people's training. In this connection we may obtain pardon for concocting a few lines of original poetry, in re

OUR BOY.

We spoke about "Our Boys" " success
While Jim was by; and he
Put on a smile of conscious pride
That was a sight to see!

.....They have been playing the "Mischief" at Tony Pastor's. Nay, dear reader, be not beguiled by false alarms; the "Mischief" we refer to is one of the laughable sketches produced there. Ah-ha!..... Thus does Tony add one more to the newly-imported wares that have taken the town by storm; and, with the importers, it is no longer a question whether they accept coin or currency, but whether or not they will get anything. Isn't this a pretty state of affairs! The truth of the matter is, we are beginning to do our own acting, and our own singing. When John Kelly, from the rostrum of Tammany, ahled his castor into the Ring, and.....But avast there! we are on the wrong track, as was William Allen of Ohio.....The latest bill of fare at the Lyceum gives us a "Wonderful Duck." Judging by the favor with which it is received, it is by no means a cold "Duck;" but, rather, tending into consideration the surroundings, it is a canvasbacked "Duck!" Reserve your applause, kind readers, until the success of the descendant of our great Fallstaff is Recorded.....O Hart! be still, or you'll be caught right out, was our comical soliloquy as we witnessed the eccentricities of Hart and Courtright at the Olympic, one night last week. And this reminds us that knowledge is power, and the possession of this knowledge makes us think of School-craft! To see Luke warm a lukewarm house would do you good. And while we are in the variety circle, let us mention the fact that our Original Sinn's very popular in Brooklyn. Although Sinn's a natty man—no, James; he isn't from the West—he attends strictly to biz .....In recognition of the services conferred upon the public by the masons and other branches of our mechanical industry, it may kindle envious feelings in the breasts of our own workers when we inform the latter that at Buffalo, on the 14th inst., Hugo De Payen's Commandery won the prize-banner as the best-drilled organization of Knights-Templar in this State. Being the best-drilled, they must have been pretty well bored, and we didn't take much guess work in that joke, either.....On account of illness, Charlotte Cushman declares that she is unable to read, just now. And she does right!.....The press and public are finding fault because Billy Emerson earns two hundred dollars per week by slinging his foot, while Ralph Waldo Emerson doesn't do so well by slinging ink! Well, we doesn't Ralph give up his headwork and try his heels? There is too much grumbling about such things, and it's got to be stopped, or twice ten thousand editors will know the reason why.....We are told that Ernest Longfellow, son of the poet, is getting up a volume of American scenes. Ah-ha! Going to be a scene-painter! We always thought that the tastes of the Longfellows ran in dramatic grooves. And the young one's Ernest about it, too. And talking about these Longfellows reminds us of a short fellow, Hans Von Bulow, who is about to show up. But we'll make rhymes about him, as it shuts:

Man wants but little Hans Bulow,
But wants that little long.

.....What makes us so sharp, to-day, is owing to our getting a Hat to bet us two to one that Bill Allen could be elected by ten thousand majority.....Unadorned concert not having met with "deserved success," Titiens is about to Handel oratorio.....Long-a-coming wants to know why she can't have an opera-house. That's what we have a right to anticipate shorts

BUSINESS was fair at the Griswold Opera-house, Troy, N. Y., during the week ending Oct. 16. Minnie Palmer, the star, is a beautiful girl of some sixteen years, but, unfortunately, has so plays adapted to her size, age and ability "Bob the Modern Puck" is an uninteresting piece, in which the little lady enacts the role of a waiter, with a change to a sort of Jack Sheppard. In the old play, "Satan in Paris," she appears to better advantage in the six protean parts, whether in that play nor in "The Green Bushes" did she prove thoroughly successful. ..... Every seat in parquet and balcony for Lotta in "Musette" 18 was sold before sunset on the 16th. ..... Rose Wood and Lewis Morrison open 19 in "Lotus Flower," remaining the rest of the week..... Augusta Dargon opens 25 in "Queen Mary." ..... Stage-manager Eugene F. Everle has volunteered to give the patients at the Marshall Infirmary a matinee performance 20, when a comedy will be performed, and Lewis Morrison will recite a selection..... Eleven hundred people attended the representation of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" by Mrs. G. C. Howard and company at Troy, N. Y., on the 15th inst. The company appeared at Schenectady 16. Letter of Oct. 17.

THE COGSWELL COMBINATION produced "The Two Orphans" at the St. Charles Theatre, New Orleans, La., last Saturday night, to a crowded house, in defiance of an injunction issued by Judge Hawkins. The managers and company were to have been brought into court to answer for contempt on Oct. 18. So a telegram from that city informs us.

AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Buffalo, N. Y., Furbish's Fifth-avenue Combination played "The Two Orphans" the entire past week to good houses. They open in Pittsburg Oct. 18. James Lewis, in "Our Boys," will hold the boards this week.

OUR BOSTON, MASS., letter upon amusements having gone astray in the post-office, we present a brief summary of amusements in that city, culled from the newspapers. At the Boston Theatre Barry Sullivan closed the first week of his engagement, acting in "Richard III," "The Lady of Lyons" having been given at the matinee. This week he is to act in "The Gamester" Oct. 18, 21, "Hamlet 19, "Macbeth" 20, 22. "The Stranger" matinee 23 ..... At the Museum "The Big Bonanza" is to be given this week ..... At the Globe Theatre "Our Boys" will be continued.

AN IRISH COMEDIAN, a good singer, and one capable of playing genteel Irish comedy, is wanted by "Irish Comedian," who advertises that he would like to hear from Jerry Cohan.

IN NOTICING the production of "Our Boys" at the Pittsburg Opera-house, The Chronicle says of Mr. James Lewis' impersonation of Perkyn Middlewick: Mr. J. seems to have justified the high encomiums which heralded his coming. He made the most of his role, and evinced, in an unmistakable manner, more than ordinary ability. He is a careful and judicious actor, and assures his part, consequently his performance as a whole is even and acceptable. It is a rare satisfaction to find an actor who identifies himself so fully with his character as to shade off even into the minutiæ of little mannerisms that make up a complete portraiture—and such a one is Mr. Lewis.

E. L. KENDALL commenced a week's engagement at Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 11, appearing in the legitimate drama to full houses. The Daily State Register thus speaks of him:

KENDALL AS HAMLET.—Mr. Kendall's Richelieu stamped him as an actor of far more than ordinary merit, and his wonderful success in this part doubtless tempted him to essay a session of the difficult parts he is now playing. The gentleman is entitled to the thanks of the public for his endeavor to present legitimate drama. It is also complimentary to the just taste of a Des Moines audience that the tragedy is so heartily appreciated and so finely rendered. The "Melancholy Dane" found in him a worthy personation, and received at his hands acting marked by an intense study and an intelligent comprehension of the difficult part. His passions are not torn in tatters, his fashion does not rant, but recites them with a melancholy pathos and earnest intonation that lead to them an additional charm. Nor is he deficient in any of the other parts. The noted ghost-scene will long live in the memory of those that saw it as a personation of most decided merit; while the last act, and also in the scene where Hamlet gives the rebuking command to Ophelia "Get thee to a nunnery," Kendall was fully equal to any actor we ever saw in the part. Altogether, his impersonation may fairly be reckoned not only a success, but a brilliant success.

MUSICAL.

A NUMBER of brass instruments, band caps, etc., can be purchased at the advertised figures from John C. Jones.

BILLY WALLACE, the author of the song "Murphy, Lay Down, You're Ill, G.," published in our last issue, has sold that song to Wm. Scanlon of Scanlon and Cronin, and he states that it is duly copyrighted.

MATTHIAS KELLER, the distinguished musical composer, died in Boston, Mass., Oct. 12, of paralysis, at the age of 69 years. "Keller's American Hymn," of which he was the composer, gave him a great reputation, which was augmented by his highly popular songs. The hymn was a great feature of P. S. Gilmore's Boston Jubilees. There is scarcely a family in America that does not possess some of his songs. He set many of the poems of Dexter Smith, the well-known ballad-writer. The musical profession was largely represented at his funeral.

"THAT COMICAL" BROWN concertized in Buckfield, Me., Oct. 12, Paris Hill 13, Rumford 14, Andover 15, Locke's Mills 16.

A PIANIST and solo-violinist who also plays in brass can be engaged by addressing "Musical," as per card.

MARA'S GEORGIA MINSTRELS performed in St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 12, Minneapolis 13, Hastings 14, Red Wing 15, Winona 16. Route: Owatonna 18, Mankato 19.

BRYANT'S MINSTRELS performed in Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 15, Lockport 16, and are to show in Buffalo 18, Dunkirk 19, Erie, Pa., 20, Cleveland, O., 21, 22, Sandusky 23, Toledo 25, 26.

HARRY ROBINSON'S MINSTRELS are to show in Canton, O., Oct. 18, Farmington 19, Galesburg 20, Monmouth 21, Burlington 22, Mount Pleasant 23, Ottumwa 25.

HALLY & LEON'S MINSTRELS are billed for Titusville, Pa., Nov. 2, Warren 3, Jamestown, N. Y., 4, under the management of Chas. D. Goodsell, manager of the Parshall Opera-house, in Titusville.

A SOPRANO SINGER desires an engagement with a concert troupe. See Miss L. Lawrence's card.

"PLANTER" advertises for a position with a traveling or permanent troupe, and can be addressed care of this office for engagements upon any occasion.

BANJOS, instruction books, etc., can be obtained at Henry C. Dobson's establishment, advertised in this issue.

THE SKIFF CONTINENTAL VOCALISTS, who were booked to appear in Titusville, Pa., Oct. 15, 16, have changed the dates to 22 and 23.

THE CAMILLA URSO CONCERT TROUPE are to perform at Auburn, N. Y., Oct 18, Owego 19, Binghamton 20, Utica 21, Elmira 22, Waverly 23.

AN ORCHESTRAL LEADER, who can play brass, and an E-flat cornet who can play second violin, are advertised for by Chas. Shay, manager Quinquiplexal Show.

AN A AND AN E FLAT CLARIONET, also a violin and box, are advertised for sale by Albert Merrick.

J. M. GOODALE, Jr., violin soloist, pianist, etc., concertizes in the Temple, Portsmouth, N. H., Oct. 18, Dover 20. He can be addressed for engagements as per card.

MRS. JAMES A. OATES and her Comic-opera Company commenced a two weeks' engagement at the Arch-street Theatre, Philadelphia, on the 11th inst. On October, and proved an attraction sufficiently enjoyable to insure a very large attendance nightly. J. Cheever Goodwin's excellent English version of "Girofle-Girofla" was produced the first three evenings, Mrs. Oates creating a decidedly favorable impression in the character without vulgarity or the personation of the title-role. and Charles H. Drew singing and acting admirably as Marasquin. The opera was handsomely mounted, the costumes, scenery and effects being new and costly. The chorusses were very fairly rendered. "Mme. Angot's Child" was given on the evening of the 14th, 15th and 16th inst., Mrs. Oates investing the title-role with great piquancy and effect, and James H. Jones' make-up and personation of Louchard being a rare bit of comic acting. During the second and last week will be presented the operas of "The Princess of Trebizonde," "La Jolie Parfumeuse," "Les Bavards" and "Trial by Jury," the latter being presented for the first time in America on the 22d.

THE BOSTON PHILHARMONIC CLUB and the English Glee Club of New York will give a concert at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, on Oct. 31.

THE MEXICAN JUVENILE OPERA TROUPE gave a couple of representations of "The Grand Duchess" at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, on the evening of the 15th inst., and at a matinee on the 16th, attracting large audiences. Senorita Carman Unda y Moron gave a bright, fresh and delightful personation of the Grand Duchess, and was ably seconded by her sister Guadalupe in the role of Wanda. Between the acts, Senorita Soledad Unda y Moron sang very sweetly "The Carnival of Venice," the entire entertainment being a most enjoyable one, and giving much satisfaction. The troupe will return, for a series of matinees at the Wainut-street Theatre, Philadelphia, during the week commencing Oct. 25.

A CORNET-SOLOIST is wanted by F. B. Dobson, manager Wallace Sisters' Company. He advertises that he would like to hear from Hiram F. Henry.

A SOPRANO WANTED for a Variety Combination for a Swiss-bell troupe by C. M. Robinson, who advertises.

THE JULIA MATHEWS' TROUPE opened at Col. Wood's Museum, Philadelphia, on the 11th inst., in "Gitroff and Girofle." Miss Mathews was unable to appear, on account of serious illness, and Miss Rose Temple essayed instead the dual title-role. The attendance being small, and Miss Mathews continuing indisposed, the engagement came to a sudden and unsatisfactory termination with the performance of the 13th inst., the troupe then disbanding. Samuel Colville, who brought the troupe to this country, has been a heavy loser; but has acted honorably throughout towards them, and will pay their passage back to Europe. Julia Mathews left Philadelphia on the 16th inst. for New York City.

ZIMMERMAN'S MEXICAN JUVENILE-OPERA COMPANY gave two matinee performances at Ford's Opera-house, Baltimore, Md., Oct. 12, 13.

I. N. PATTISON gave the second of his series of pianoforte recitals and lectures at the Brooklyn Academy of Music on Oct. 16. His subject was "Gottschalk."

MME. TITIENS sings at the Academy, Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 18.

THE HOLMANS appear at the Grand Opera-house, Detroit, Mich., Oct. 18, 19, 20, 21, opening in "Girofle-Girofla."

W. J. STANTON, flute-player, is now engaged at the Boylston Museum, Boston, Mass.

GUS WILLIAMS' "Latest and Best 25-cent Songster," containing 200 songs and 21 pieces of music, has just been issued by R. M. De Witt in handsome style. See card.

THE HUTCHINSON FAMILY is to sing at Portland, Me., Oct. 21.

CAROLINE RICHINGS-BERNARD'S ENGLISH-OPERA COMPANY is to perform "The Rose of Tyrol" in Portland, Me., Oct. 21.

THE BOSTON PHILHARMONIC CLUB is to perform in the Music Hall, Erie, Pa., Oct. 25.

SONGS for sketches, and anything in the musical line, can be had of Roe Stephens, publisher, who advertises.

DR. HANS GUIDO VON BULOW arrived in Boston, Mass., from Europe, during the past week, and is announced to make his American debut at the Music Hall in that city Oct. 18, continuing his concerts 20, 22.

JOHN LOVELOCK, banjo-teacher, advertises something new for beginners on this instrument.

VARIETY HALLS.

FEMALE PERFORMERS are wanted at the Atlantic Varieties, Brooklyn, N. Y. See advertisement.

HERR SCHULER, physiognomist and delineator, can be secured to give his entertainments by addressing as per card.

D. SHAW, who advertises, wants to engage variety and dramatic artists.

AT THE CENTRAL THEATRE, Baltimore, Md., the fresh attractions on Oct. 11 were the Clinetop Sisters in their skipping-rope dance; Harry Leslie, who walked a tight-rope stretched from the theatre to a house opposite, prior to the opening of the performances; Goldie and Barry in Ethiopian songs-and-dances; the Irma Quartet—an organization having some local renown, but little merit—and Frankie Christie, Antoinette Kuriz, Lillie Francis and Eliza Wilson, who took part in the female-minstrel scene and the ballet. The performance began with a female-minstrel scene, which called into requisition the entire strength of the company, besides many new faces. "La Rose," a ballet arranged by Fred Seigel, was very pretty and pleasing. "Ernani," a burlesque, was the closing feature of the programme. The departures on the 16th were John Le Favre Manning, to the Vaudeville Theatre, Louisville, Ky.; Harry Leslie and Viola Clifton, to the Comique, Washington; and Lottie Grant, to Deagle's Varieties, St. Louis. For Oct. 18 Harry and Louise Mendel, Iona Lasig, the Leonardis, and De Witt Cook are announced. Business good..... Tim Morris and Ella Heflin were the new arrivals at the Odeon on Oct. 11. Nora Campbell was prevented by sickness from appearing, as previously announced. Ella Heflin and Tim Morris, to Pittsburg; Louise Bliss, to the Avenue Theatre, Washington; the Lopez Family, to Richmond; and C. L. Davis were the departures on the 16th. To open 18: Bryant and Williams, John Barthey, Lillie Ardine, and Ella Sheldon. Business continues good..... The O'Neill combination and Harry De Lave, who opened Oct. 14, were the new features at the Centennial Varieties. Blanche Roselle, to Washington, was the only departure Oct. 16. Ada Clifford opens Oct. 18. Advices of Oct. 17.

AT THE ODEON, Newark, N. J., business has continued good the past week. The new faces were the Carrolls (minus Little Dick, who is reported as having broken his arm while performing in Philadelphia), who were greeted with lavish applause and recalled nightly; the Lamonts—Jennie and Albert—two fine acrobats and aerial performers, and De Witt Cooke the club-swinger, whose act was artistic. Departures 16: The Lamonts, who join M. B. Leavitt; Blanche Selwyn, to Tony Pastor's, New York; and De Witt Cooke, to Grand Central, Baltimore. Announced for 18 are the Seigrist Family, acrobats; the Stuart Sisters, musical sketches; and Kate O'Connor, Irish vocalist..... The fresh people at the Metropolitan Oct. 11 were the Sharpley Bros., Emily Prior, Sallie Mason and R. V. Ferguson. Miss Prior, who won a flattering reputation on her first visit to this theatre, did not detract from it in the least, and was encord four and five times each night. Sallie Mason is a very pleasing vocalist, and gave complete satisfaction. R. V. Ferguson pleased everyone in his grotesque acts. The Sharpley Bros. performed together one night only, owing to an accident happening to Jones while returning from New York on Oct. 12. In his stead, Harry Fields, a new beginner of more than ordinary ability, doubled up with the other brother, and gave satisfaction. Biz very good. Departures 16 are the Boissetts, who lay off, and the Sharpley Brothers. Next week (18) the St. Felix Troupe; Andy Collom, comedian and banjoist; the Brothers Turtle, flying trapeze; Mons. Ventini and Ned Trainor, pantomime and specialties; and Frank Mara, Irish comedian..... Ned Wambold and Fred Sharpley (the original Fred), comedians, open at Ward's Varieties, Paterson, N. J., 18. Letter of Oct. 16.

AT THE CAPITOL THEATRE, Albany, N. Y., the new faces Oct. 11 were Sanford and Fielding, song-and-dance; Harry Weeks, actor; Prof. Neil Gleason and trained dog Dexter; Willie and Ocie Gaylord, contortionists, etc.; Eloise Allen and Nellie Blanchard, vocalists; and Edmund Pierce in his drama of "Kansas Jack." These people were all well received, especially Willie Gaylord, whose performances are decidedly clever. A female-minstrel scene was put on during the week, and this, combined with the wonderful clog dancing of the Henri Family, the comicalities of Harry Armstrong, etc., made up a very enjoyable programme. Departures Oct. 16: the Henri Family, Norah Campbell, and Sanford and Fielding, to New York; Edmund Pierce, to Buffalo; and Prof. Gleason, to Providence. The following are announced for the 18th: W. H. Harry Rice, the Gorman Brothers, Andy Williams, Billy Burr, Maggie Bowers, Belle Wallace, and Miss Montrose. Business is good. Letter of Oct. 16.

MURPHY and MACK, Irish sketch artists, have been re-engaged at the Theatre Comique, St. Louis, Mo.

SAM S. SANFORD, the old-time minstrel performer, who is at present performing at the Third-avenue Theatre, New York, opens at the Theatre Comique, Providence, R. I., Nov. 1, and has open dates after Nov. 15. Address as per advertisement.

PADDY MURPHY is at present performing with the Brennan & Ware Combination, at the Adelphi Theatre, Chicago, Ill., to crowded houses.

R. M. DE WITT has just published six more numbers of his popular negro and Ethiopian dramas, bringing the series up to No. 50; price, fifteen cents each. For further particulars see advertisement.

AT HOWARD'S GLOBE THEATRE, New Orleans, La., up to Oct. 16, the business was good. Reynolds and Adams, who opened Oct. 11 in Dutch specialties, made a decided hit, and were abundantly applauded. The Misco Sisters also made their first appearances in the olio, and gave some graceful dancing. Mrs. E. F. Barnes, who has been recently suffering from quite a severe sickness, is so far recovered as to be out, and will soon appear upon the stage of the Globe. Underlined is the Vienna Orchestra, consisting of thirteen young ladies. Advices of Oct. 12.

HARRY G. RICHMOND, leading comedian of the Grand Central Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., inserts a card in this issue.

LILLIE DE VERE PARSONS in her variety specialty business is advertised for by C. Spada.

NED STRAIGHT, song-writer, Theatre Comique, Cumberland, Md., inserts a card in this issue.

WALTER MOROSCO of the Morosco Family, and Miss Ella La Rue, both performing in Allen's Theatre, Cheyenne, W. T., were married by the Rev. H. Noble on Oct. 10.

MOLLIE NELSON was the only fresh arrival at the Bella Union, Cheyenne, W. T., since our last report.

J. SHARPLEY of the Sharpley Brothers met with a painful accident while returning from New York to Newark, N. J., on the evening of Oct. 12. In coming on the ferry-boat he missed his footing and stepped down between the boat and the bridge, while the boat was on a rebound from the bridge; the boat on the instant coming up and catching him by the leg, between the ankle and knee, inflicting a painful wound and spraining his ankle. He was immediately caught up and cared for until the arrival of an ambulance, when he was taken to a hospital, but has since been taken to his home. At last accounts he was doing as well as could be expected, and was in hopes to be able to be out again soon.

IT IS SAID that Mr. Babbage is about to open De Bar's Opera-house, Montreal, Canada, as a variety and minstrel theatre.

FANNY MAY, Western and Walling, Edna Laurent and Harry Osborne opened at the Theatre Comique, Cleveland, O., Oct. 11. On the 12th the new returns were read from the stage as fast as received, and a large throng of people were in attendance. Business during the rest of the week was uniformly good. The Kize Brothers go to the Adelphi, Toledo, Ohio, Rosa and Della Wallace close same date, to Theatre Comique, Toledo, O.

THE QUEEN'S THEATRE COMIQUE, Toronto, Ont., under Mr. Marshall's management, closed Oct. 8, but reopened 11 under the management of J. McBride & J. Richardson, with the following company: Connolly and De Forest in acrobatic songs-and-dances; Nellie Stanley, balladist; the Austin Brothers, double-clog; Chisholm and Clark, double song-and-dance; H. T. Howard, comedian; J. H. McBride, drum-soloist; Ettie Le Clair, dancer; May McBride, serio-comic; and Johnny Richardson, comedian. Business very good, considering the miserable weather. Advices of Oct. 14.

AT THE GRAND CENTRAL, Troy, N. Y., Hugh Fay, Patti Rosa, Add Weaver and son, Bob Scott, Seamon and Somers, Minnie Seamon, Ella Mayo, Joe Buckley and Harry Montague appeared during the week ending Oct. 16 to satisfied audiences of liberal dimensions. Fay made a hit. Montague, Rosa, Scott and W. H. Lloyd quit 16, the latter to join the Katie Putnam dramatic party. The arrivals on the 18th are to be Pat Rooney, Josie Granger, Mons. Lavarnies, Ada Emocleer, and Johnny Williams..... A bookkeeper is talking of opening the Olympic for a snap from Thanksgiving through the holidays; but there are several hundred dollars of old indebtedness for fixtures, scenery, etc., to be lifted before one can tread the managerial boards freely. Advices of Oct. 17.

EMMA BRENNAN, vocalist, can be engaged through her agent, Sig. Vallo, who advertises.

LILLIAN FORREST, serio-comic vocalist, notifies managers that she has a few open dates, and can be engaged by addressing care of this office.

M. D., whose address is care of this office, offers a variety garden and theatre for sale.

ARTISTS OF ABILITY, especially ladies, are wanted at the Vaudeville Theatre, Louisville, Ky. See advertisement.

CINCINNATI VARIETY NEWS is sent by our correspondent, dating the 16th, as follows: "The new feature at the National Theatre Comique this week have been the spectacle of 'The Ice Witch,' introducing A. Martinetti as sprite, and Ida Devere as premiere dancer; Ed. Murray and Alice Ross, whose character sketches are excellent; Charles Edwards in German specialties; and the Holland Brothers and Mlle. Violetta in difficult trapeze feats. 'The Ice Witch' was put on very fairly as regards scenery, and had a large ballet. The speaking parts were done by Barry Mack, James Douglas, E. Barry, F. Traynor, John Foster, W. Clark, Mrs. J. R. Allen, Lottie Brown and others, and all the various acts were introduced into the drama. The attendance has been large, considering the election excitement. The spectacle will close with the week. Marthetti and Mlle. Devere going with it. Departures on the 16th: Annie Hall, for Louisville; Charles Diamond, for St. Louis; and the Hawley Brothers. Engaged for the 18th: Ada Laurent, Emma Brettis, Redman and Devere, Julia Kent, Sommers Lovett and Hiram Robbins, the latter three appearing in the border drama of "Wild Bill."..... The Grand Central Theatre has experienced a radical change. Joe A. Gulick, the manager, and E. F. Gorman, stage-manager, left on Monday, and were replaced by Annie Hindle as manageress and Johnny Bowman as stage-manager. The owner of the place is understood to be a lady in the city. Charles Howard has become business-manager. The only new appearances this week have been Adams and Ransom, in German sketches of a fair order. Den Thompson, in "Joshua Whitcomb," has continued to be the leading feature on the programme. Departures 16: Charley McCaslin, Annie De Lorme and Annie Clark, for Memphis; and Philomena, for St. Louis."

GEORGE F. MOORE and Kitty Henderson commence an engagement in their specialties at the Bella Union Theatre, San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 1, where first class managers can address.

BABY AND PROF. BINDLEY have open dates in November and December, and can be addressed care of this office.

J. W. MCANDREWS, George and Charles Reynolds, James G. Roome, Mons. and Mlle. D'Omer, Erwin Thomas, Ben Dodge, the Misses Minnie Lee, Minnie Rainforth, Ida Morris and Julia Davenport were the fresh attractions introduced to a full house at Trimble's Varieties Theatre, Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 11. The Female Minstrels have been reorganized, the following persons now appearing in this performance: the Misses Ida Morris, Ada Vernon, Rachel Harvard, Julia Davenport, Minnie Rainforth, Lucy Ellis, Minnie Lee, Lizzie Mulvey, Leoni Mendel, May Irwin, etc. J. W. McAndrews and Jas. D. Roome represent the bone-and Joe Lang and Harry Mendel are tambos, and Ben Dodge does the middle business. "The Watermelon Man," by Mr. McAndrews, was received with its customary favor, eliciting applause. The songs-and-dances of the Reynolds Brothers merited the liberal encomiums bestowed upon them, the gentlemen responding to repeated encores. The singing and banjo-playing of Mr. Roome were excellent, and the specialties of Mons. and Mlle. D'Omer were good features. The pedestal dances of Mr. Thomas were more than ordinarily well executed. Mr. Dodge amused the assemblage with his extemporaneous vocalisms—a line of the profession in which he is proficient, and which he handles in such a manner as to make the lady at once a favorite. Miss Rainforth's zouave-drill attested her skill in handling a musket, and the vocalization of Miss Morris was very pleasing. Miss Davenport's vocal efforts failed to please. Business during the week continued large. The house remained dark on the 15th. Miss Ella Heflin, Tim Morris, Sam Martin, C. C. Matthews and Mlle. Lauretta. Manager Aims returned from the East a few days ago, quite unwell, but is now convalescing..... The Winnetts—Lottie and Thomas—were the new people at the Fifth-avenue Theatre on Oct. 11. The sensational drama of "The Black Hand" was produced on Oct. 11, and will run all the week. Frank Jones impersonates six characters, and plays on a large number of different musical instruments. G. K. Fortescue is advertised to appear 18, but I am informed that the place is closed. The Comique Comedy Theatre was opened last August, with Sam E Ryan as director of amusements. For a time the establishment was liberally patronized, but latterly the attendance was extremely light. The theatre is centrally located, well adapted to the dramatic or variety business, and Mr. Ryan has presented a fair line of attractions, but all to no substantial purpose. However, in this instance it is again demonstrated that dramatic and variety entertainments must be run separately in Pittsburg. Advices dated Oct. 15.

THE NEW ARRIVALS at the Adelphi, Toledo, O., Oct. 11 were the Bennett Sisters, Leon Whettony and Lizzie Mulvey. The Bennett Sisters are graceful dancers, and have been well received. Leon Whettony's acts have added to the entertainment. Lizzie Mulvey did a good song-and-dance; also sang serio-comic songs. Baker and Doyle close 16, and go to Cleveland; Nellie Haywood, same date, to Detroit. The Collins Brothers, Kine Brothers, and La Pauline are to open 18..... At the Theatre Comique, the additions on Oct. 11 were Admiral Yale, Lulu Leonard, Grace Garland and Prof. Mitchell. Admiral Yale, as London impersonator and as a Yankee, failed to please. Lulu Leonard in serio-comic songs was hardly up to the standard. Grace Garland did an artistic jig, and was applauded. Prof. Mitchell evinced marked improvement since his last visit. Barney and Della Ferguson, Admiral Yale and Lulu Leonard close 11, the former to Indianapolis. M. C. Hanley, Ella Saunders, and Sig. Francis open 18..... The Atlantic Garden is doing a good business as a variety theatre. Correspondence of Oct. 15.

THE ATTENDANCE at the Theatre Comique, Providence, R. I., the past week was very fair. The principal new attraction was the appearance of Sid. C. France in his drama of "Marked for Life." Mr. France was finely received, as was also several of the support, notably W. B. Collings. The piece was well placed upon the stage, and some new and excellent scenery reflects credit upon the artist, P. H. Hill. The new faces same date in the variety line were Emerson and Clark, who made a hit in their songs-and-dances, and Fannie Archer, a tolerably good songstress. The departures 16 were to Philadelphia: the Lavarnies, to Paterson, N. J.; T. E. Jackson and Coral Leigh, to Hartford, Ct. The Fieldings, Harry Miller, and Clara Seabrook are billed for 18..... Stetson's Star Company, from the Howard Athenæum, Boston, appears at the Academy of Music 15, 16, to excellent business. The company is a strong one, and includes Hughey Dougherty, Little Mac, Harry Bloodgood, Commodore Nutt, Larry Tooley, Walters and Morton, and the Garnellas. The performance throughout was first-class. The same company are to return to Boston, opening there 18..... Logrenia, with his trained birds and mice, is "doing" Rhode Island, with F. G. Brayton as business-manager and C. A. Patt as agent. He appears at Wakefield 20, Wyoming 21. Business good. Letter of Oct. 17.

THE GRAND CENTRAL VARIETY THEATRE, Richmond, Va., opened for the season Oct. 11 with Harry Dumont, sole lessee; Harry Jefferson, business and stage manager; Lou Voelker, leader of orchestra; and the following company: Carrie Gardner, Wannetta Craven, Mattie Gray, Messrs. H. Thatcher, F. Leonard, Dayton, Hume, and T. Hodges. Miss Fannie Faver was added to the company the 12th. The first part was decidedly effective, their being four end-men, with Jefferson as interlocutor. Miss Gardner in her ballads takes well. Mattie Gray showed to good advantage in her songs-and-dances, as also did Miss Craven in her statue-business. Fannie Faver is an established favorite, and Thatcher and Hume in their double songs-and-dances were very good. The singing of Hedges and his piccolo-solos have been the most artistic feature of the performances. The company has as a whole given excellent satisfaction, playing to good houses nightly. Harry Leonard closes the 20th. The Wood Sisters are announced to open the 18th..... Business at the Theatre Comique remains good. Miss Fannie Faver opened the 11th; but as the managers of the Grand Central had a prior engagement, the lady closed at the Comique the same evening. The Parker Sisters put in an appearance 14, and proved to be good cards. The Wood Sisters close 16. Jerome and Campbell, Gus Bernard, and the Lopez Family are billed to open 18. A new drop-curtain painted by John Franklin, has been put up and adds greatly to the appearance of the theatre. Letter of Oct. 16.

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Washington, D. C., the new arrivals Oct. 11 were Frank Carlton and Weslyn and Casey. The sensational drama of "Lola, or the Cigar Girls of Cuba," concluded the evening's performance, Frank H. Nelson in the role of Sol Switch. Business continues good. The changes 16 and 17 were the Cawthornes, Jennie Leslie, Lizzie Byron and Griffin and Rice. The announcements for Oct. 18 are Harry Lealle, Clara and Alice Coleman, the three Arnold Brothers, Aubrey and Moulton, Viola Clifton, and J. W. Coleman..... The Avenue Theatre did a good business during the week ending Oct. 16, as also Oct. 11 were Clara Belmont, the Ifend Sisters, Jerome and Cameron, and the Harrison Sisters, all of whom met with favor. The departures Oct. 16 were Jerome and Cameron, Minnie Gray, and Rouke and Walters. The announcements for Oct. 18 are Blanche Roselle and Louise Bartlett, letter of Oct. 17.

SMITH'S OPERA-HOUSE, East Saginaw, Mich., reopened Oct. 11 with Ida Carlisle, Emma Clifford, Jennie Livingston, Niles and Evans, and Fred Roberts to fair business. Johnny Balger, Sheffer and Nelson, and the Bennett Sisters failed to put in an appearance or render any reason why. The company is to open at Grand Rapids, at the Adelphi, on the 19th, which place will hereafter be known as Smith's Opera-house, he having rented that place for one year. Advices of Oct. 14.

AT SEELEY'S ADELPHI, Buffalo, N. Y., the audiences the past week have been large and enthusiastic. Laura Alberta, Adelaide Eaton and T. R. Hann, in the drama "Twice Saved," have been the chief attractions. The prima-donna burlesque business of W. Henry Rice was decidedly successful, and the other specialists made themselves felt in an unmistakable way. The departures Oct. 16 are Crossley and Elder, no engagement; Conway and Kerrigan, to Boston; James Larkin and Carrie Armstrong, not engaged; T. R. Hann and Laura Alberta, who open in Mrs. Holman's Opera-house, London, Ont., on the 18th; and Edna Markley to the New York. The arrivals Oct. 18 are to be Wayne and Lovely, Baby Bindley, Prof. Bindley, Carlyle and Sons, the Brandt Sisters, and Frank George. Letter of Oct. 14.

THE VAUDEVILLE THEATRE, Louisville, Ky., continues to attract large audiences. The new faces on Oct. 11 were Lucy Adams, change-artist, who received a large share of applause; Guy Linton, who has made a hit in his character impersonations; and Antoinette Sevoy, one of the most finished and artistic serio-comic vocalists that have yet graced the vaudeville stage. Correspondence of Oct 14.

DAVIDSON AND MURRAY of Buffalo, N. Y., are to test their skill in clog-dancing at St. James Hall Nov. 5. The match is for $100 a side.

FIRST-CLASS ARTISTS are wanted at the National Theatre Comique, Cincinnati, O. Address James Douglas, as per card. Mr. Douglas would also like to hear from Alice Placide, Harry Clifford, Lottie Grant and the Perry Brothers.

THE WAITE SISTERS, who will be at liberty Nov. 8, can be addressed at the Metropolitan Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.

THE POSES of E. S. Washburn's Last Sensation is Holyoke, Mass., Oct. 20, Chicopee Falls 21, Westfield 22, Springfield 23, Hartford, Ct., 25, New Britain 26, Meriden 27, Portland 28, Middletown 29, Wallingford 30, New Haven Nov. 1. Business is reported large during the past week. The Daly Bros., song-and-dance, joined the company Oct. 9; also six Chippewa Indians. Major Holman joins the party Oct. 23 as assistant-agent, and W. S. Shedman, gymnast, 20.

GIBSON AND DAVENPORT, song-and-dance artists, insert their address in another column, and state that they would like to hear from responsible managers.

SAM MARTIN can be engaged some time after Oct. 20, as per circular, is at present engaged at Trimble's Varieties, Pittsburg, Pa., where he can be addressed.

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Detroit, Mich., Oct. 11, we had several new people, who revived the business to such an extent that Manager Welch feels proud of his new departure, remarks our correspondent under date of Oct. 16, continuing: "Ella and Kitty Lee appeared in character sketches, which would have been better if the songs introduced had been fresh. In their double-jig they were immense. Lew Brimmer in his banjolems did not compare to advantage with his predecessor. Prof. and Baby Bindley gave a musical act that was exceedingly pleasant; the Baby's 'Muldoon' was irresistible, she having the exact walk and make-up. Frank Wild won applause by his old-man act, 'Old Uncle John.' Susie Linden danced a sailor's hornpipe. The favorites, however, of the evening were Harry and Fannie Wood, both being tendered a hearty reception, and honored with several recalls. Harry has a baritone vocalist is advertised for.

BUCKLEY'S SERENADERS start on a provin ial tour at Lynn, Mass., Oct. 25, going thence to Salem 26, Gloucester, 27, Bridgeford, Me., 28, Portland, 29, 30, Portsmouth, N. H., Nov. 1, Manchester 2. The entire company, now performing in Beethoven Hall, Boston, Mass., will appear in the same programme as given there. G. A. Sawin is the general agent.

HUGH HAMALL, a singer of some note, and formerly connected with the late Hamall's Serenaders, died in Montreal, Canada, Oct. 10, of disease of the kidneys. He was a man of much promise, and was ever ready to contribute his talent for all entertainments for charitable purposes. He was the fourth son of Arthur Hamall. The funeral took place Oct. 12.

KELLY & LEON'S MINSTRELS occupied Ford's Opera-house, Washington, D. C. during the week ending Oct. 16. The attendance during the week was small.

A NUMBER of performers are wanted for Celia Berger's Lady Minstrels, including vocalists, leader of orchestra, etc. See P. L. Lowell's card.

CARNCROSS & DIXEY'S MINSTRELS, Philadelphia, presented a pleasing programme last week, the most salient features thereof being the burlesque of "Our Boys."

HARRY SLATE, ex-minstrel, ex-clown, ex-laying-on-of-hands-doctor, ex-fakir, etc., is to give a spiritual trickery expose at a hall in Troy, N. Y., Oct. 19.

MARA'S GEORGIA MINSTRELS are meeting with success on their Northwestern tour, writes an occasional correspondent. "The company has been strengthened for the present season and numbers eighteen performers. The programme is entirely new, and the

CARD. CONCERNING BENEFITS AND SPECULATION ENGAGEMENTS FOR THE COMING SEASON OF 1875 AND '76. DUPREZ & BENEDICT'S ORIGINAL NEW ORLEANS GIGANTIC MINSTRELS AND BRASS BAND, GREAT TRIPLE COMPANY AND BURLESQUE OPERA TROUPE OF TWENTY-FOUR YEARS' ORGANIZATION, AND MOST SUCCESSFUL, RELIABLE AND POWERFUL MINSTREL BAND IN THE WORLD. Have received thousands of applications throughout the entire country the past seasons from Lyceum Lecture Course Committees, Firemens Companies, Public Library Societies, School Committees, Home Orphan Institutions, Temperance and Benevolent Societies, and many machinists and other organizations, asking and inquiring particulars, if the services of our company could be engaged on a certainty for one or two nights to play for their benefits, etc. We have also received hundreds of applications from proprietors of Opera-houses, Theatres, Rooms of Halls, Rinkooters and others, wanting to know if we would arrange dates to play for them on certainty, or sell our receipts for one or two nights for their own special specific date, etc., etc. But all such applications we had to decline to negotiate, owing to an extensive traveling route being always arranged five and nine months ahead, which prevented us from accepting any of the above offers whatever. But now we take great pleasure to announce to all the above applicants that we have made arrangements the coming season to accept all such above-mentioned engagements, providing the same will come on our regular route, or within forty to sixty miles from each city we visit, and we to reserve the exclusive right to fix the day and date for such benefits most convenient to our route. Our terms will be from two hundred and fifty dollars ($250) to four hundred and fifty dollars ($450) per night, according to the size of the city and the standing reputation of the company therein. We will give the entire entertainment, and furnish all our regular usual advertisements, consisting of large Pictorial Posters, Advance Ribbon Dodgers, Daily Minstrel Heralds of eight pages of reading matter, Local Band Dodgers and Route Programmes. We will pay for posting and advertisements in dailies; and, in fact, we will pay and furnish everything else required to make the entertainment a success except opera-house or hall rent, license, gas, and help required to run the same, which must be furnished and paid for by the parties engaging us. We will also furnish the services of our two first-class agents, who will advertise each and every city thoroughly seven to ten days in advance. First-class managers of theatres wishing to make engagements during the regular season, for one or two weeks on a certainty, will meet with prompt attention, and we will endeavor to fix such dates to suit them. The following are some of the cities we shall visit this coming season, giving an idea of our route to all intended applicants, and they can govern themselves accordingly: Commencing with the Monday morning after closing: Pittsburg, Pa., Philadelphia, Wilmington, Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, Providence, R. I., Lowell, Manchester, Portland, Worcester, Hartford, Lawrence, Albany, Newark, Trenton, Harrisburg, Wilmington, Easton, Scranton, Lancaster, Elmira, Utica, Williamsport, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Wheeling, Columbus, Erie, Detroit, East Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Fort Wayne, Battle Creek, Lafayette, Dayton, Indianapolis, Terre Haute, Marietta, Portsmouth, Lexington, Chillicothe, Evansville, Memphis, Nashville, Jackson, Vicksburg, New Orleans, Galveston, Houston, Little Rock, Cairo, Quincy, Keokuk, Peoria, Springfield, Bloomington, Madison, St. Paul, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Dubuque, Fond du Lac, Green Bay, Mankato, Leavenworth City, Council Bluffs, Sioux City, Yankton, Omaha, Denver City, Salt Lake, San Francisco, Sacramento, Stockton, Marysville, Virginia City, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Atchison, Jefferson City, Huntsville, Ala., Chattanooga, Knoxville, Norfolk, Petersburg, Richmond, Montreal, Quebec, Ottawa, and Toronto. All letters of application must be addressed to No. 135 North Third street, Philadelphia, Pa., to CHAS. H. DUPREZ.

Manager of the Great Duprez & Benedict's Minstrels.
Cut this out and keep it for future reference.
P. S.—Arrangements can also be made on the arrival in each city, ten days in advance of the company, with our only authorized general business agent.
